Preparations in Pennsylvania to Repel Invasion.

ANOTHER ORDER FROM GOV. CURTIN.

HAGERSTOWN OCCUPIED BY THE REBELS.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Sept. 11.

The Bulletin's Harrisburgh dispatch says that Hagerstown is occupied by only 250 rebel cavalry. The main rebel army is at Funktown, 2½ miles off. A small party had appeared a short distance from the State line.

Pennsylvania is not yet invaded.

JACKSON is reported to be at Middletown, with 12,000 men, mostly cavalry.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Sept. 11.

A special dispatch to the Inquirer, of this city, says: "Information has just been received from a highly reliable source, that the rebels, 20,000 strong, with 48 pieces of artillery, took possession of Hagerstown at 6:30 o'clock this morning. The telegraph operator skedaddled."

FROM GEN. McCLELLAN'S ARMY.

ROCKVILLE, Wednesday, Sept. 10—Evening.

Poolesville, about ten miles from here, is the furthest point up the river we now occupy; but as to movements generally, it would now be improper to speak.

No word has recently been received of Col. MILES' who has been occupying Harper's Ferry. The impression is that he has left that point by this time, as it would be impossible for him to hold that position while the enemy occupy Frederick, and may march upon Hagerstown, which is anticipated.

No one seems to have any definite knowledge of the numerical force now in Maryland.

There is no doubt the enemy are throwing all their available force into Maryland. Two deserters from the Twenty-Fourth North Carolina regiment arrived here to-day. They state that two of their brigades marched directly from Richmond to Frederick.

The supply trains of the rebels continue to cross into Maryland, but none are known to return.

Our troops advanced this morning.

THE ADVANCE OF THE ARMY.

From the National Intelligencer of yesterday.

By an officer who left headquarters yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, we learn that the army had advanced as far as the village of Damascus, thirty-four miles from Washington, about four miles from the Frederick County line, and sixteen from Frederictown. His ignorance of any such incident contradicts a story very prevalent yesterday, of a battle of Gen. BURNSIDE's division and its defeat.

OCCUPATION OF SUGAR-LOAF MOUNTAIN.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Sept. 11.

The Inquirer, of this city, has a special dispatch from Poolesville saying that our troops occupy Sugar Loaf Mountain.

HEAVY FIRING HEARD YESTERDAY.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Sept. 11.

The telegraph operator at Elysville reports hearing heavy cannonading in the distance all the morning.

A gentleman who arrived here from Frederick this morning confirms the previous statements as to the wretched appearance of the rebels. They appeared to be generally well-armed, but shockingly filthy. In one sense, every man might be considered a host in himself, judging from the animated nature of their persons.

PROCLAMATION OF GEN. LEE.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Sept. 11.

General LEE has issued the following proclamation:

LEE'S HEADQUARTERS,
ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
NEAR FREDERICKTOWN, Sept. 8.

To the People of Maryland:

It is right that you should know the purpose that has brought the army under my command within the limits of your State, so far as that purpose concerns yourselves.

The people of the Confederate States have long watched with the deepest sympathy the wrongs and outrages that have been inflicted upon the citizens of a Commonwealth allied to the States of the South by the strongest social, political and commercial ties, and reduced to the condition of a conquered province.

Under the pretence of supporting the Constitution, but in violation of its most valuable provisions, your citizens have been arrested and imprisoned, upon no charge, and contrary to all the forms of law.

A faithful and manly protest against this outrage made by a venerable and illustrious Marylander, to whom in better days no citizen appealed for right in vain, was treated with scorn and contempt.

The Government of your chief city has been usurped by armed strangers; your Legislature has been dissolved by the unlawful arrest of its members; freedom of the Press and of speech has been suppressed; words have been declared offences by an arbitrary decree of the Federal Executive; and citizens ordered to be tried by Military Commissioners for what they may dare to speak.

Believing that the people of Maryland possess a spirit too lofty to submit to such a Government, the people of the South have long wished to aid you in throwing off this foreign yoke, to enable you again to enjoy the inalienable rights of freemen, and restore the independence and sovereignty of your State.

In obedience to this wish our army has come among you, and is prepared to assist you with the power of its arms, in regaining the rights of which you have been so unjustly despoiled.

This, citizens of Maryland, is our mission, so far as you are concerned. No restraint upon your free will is intended; no intimidation will be allowed within the limits of this army at least. Marylanders shall once more enjoy their ancient freedom of thought and speech. We know no enemies among you, and will protect all of you in every opinion.

It is for you to decide your destiny freely and without constraint. This army will respect your choice whatever it may be, and while the Southern People will rejoice to welcome you to your natural position among them, they will only welcome you when you come of your own free will.

R. E. LEE, General Commanding.

LATEST NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Thursday—11:30 P. M.

The tenor of advices from the Upper Potomac, to-day, has been to augment the estimates of yesterday, in regard to the enemy's force there. Their number are placed at from ten thousand to one hundred thousand men, under Gens. R. E. and FITZHUGH LEE, MAGRUDER, WALKER, ANDERSON, JACKSON, LONGSTREET and A. P. HILL; and a reporter just in from Frederick puts them still higher.

Gen. LEE's proclamation is regarded as politic and mischievous.

The reporter above mentioned says that the force at Frederick, when he left, was preparing to march on Hagerstown. He heard a Colonel order his command to be in readiness for that expedition.

Large rebel forces were continually crossing the Potomac. He saw numerous pieces of artillery, generally marked U. S., at Frederick.

There has been a great rush to enlist in the rebel army. The room where names were received was besieged with applicants.

FACTS AND RUMORS IN WASHINGTON.

From the Star of Wednesday Evening.

Judging from the Baltimore papers of this morning, quite as little definite is known in that city of the numbers and movements of the rebel army in Maryland as is known here, outside of the War Department. We feel sure that the authorities here are constantly in receipt of the most contradictory information upon both those points of so absorbing interest just now. The unreliability of estimates made by persons who are not experts, relative to the number of forces, was never better exemplified than on this occasion; some estimating a force passing under their view at five thousand or ten, while others set the same force down as being a hundred thousand strong. The Government here and Gen. McCLELLAN, we apprehend, are prepared for a due reception of quite the latter number in Maryland, and we think our military authorities believe there are that number either over the river, or ready to ford it at an hour's notice.

Up to noon to-day, no movement of the rebels in Maryland, calculated to develop their numbers or their plans, were known by any portion of the public here to have been made, though the authorities of Baltimore were last night profoundly impressed with the belief that JACKSON is gradually moving his force in the direction of their city. If true, he will find a far-hotter reception there, and on the way, than he bargains for.

Last night, Gen. McCLELLAN sent hither full sixty wagon loads of knapsacks. This tells of his purpose of divesting his force of every possible incumbrance to rapid marching or effective fighting, and that he anticipates both very shortly.

Nothing up to noon to-day is known here of the presence of the rebels in any force west of the point where we located their advance westward in yesterday's Star; that is: about six miles east of Hagerstown. The fact that in twenty-four hours they have not proceeded further west indicates that their operations for the present are to be turned in this direction or that of Baltimore, if their visit to Maryland was designed for any other purpose than to sack Frederick and Washington Counties of provisions, stock, shoes, clothing, &c.

PROMPT PREPARATIONS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

ANOTHER ORDER FROM GOV. CURTIN.

HARRISBURGH, Penn., Thursday, Sept. 11.

The following order has just been issued:

By authority of the President of the United States, fifty thousand of the freemen of Pennsylvania are hereby called for immediate service, to repel the now imminent danger from invasion by the enemies of the country. Officers in command of organizations, as authorized by General Order No. 35, will at once report by telegraph the place of their headquarters, so that orders may be issued from these headquarters for transportation to Harrisburgh for such companies as may be ordered to move. Further calls will be made for additional forces as the exigences of service may require. Formation of companies under the General Orders should continue to be made as rapidly as possible, until all able-bodied loyal men of Pennsylvania are enrolled and ready for service.

By order of Gov. CURTIN.

AFFAIRS AT HARRISBURGH.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

HARRISBURGH, Wednesday, Sept. 10.

It was understood that important news was being received here by the military authorities this morning, but your correspondent could not learn the tenor of the dispatches.

Complete arrangements have been made which will prevent the rebels from playing any of their telegraphic pranks.

Major BENJAMIN WASHABAUGH, Chief of the Ordnance Department, and Col. JOHN B. PARKER, of Carlise, Aid-de-Camp to the Governor, have been appointed to superintend the organization of the Reserve Militia of Pennsylvania.

Col. PARKER's office was crowded this morning by Captains of newly organized militia companies, who are here in great numbers from all parts of the State, applying for arms.

By careful calculation it has been ascertained that there are over sixty thousand men of the Reserve Militia now thoroughly organized into companies, under the provisions of the Militia Act of 1858. In a very short time their brigade organization will be complete.

Thus far, arms have been distributed as follows:

Lancaster County	2,120 guns.
Franklin	1,500 guns.
Snyder	100 guns.
Cumberland,	1,080 guns, and 110 sabres.
Dauphin	580 guns.
Adams	1,000 guns, and 75 sabres.
York	600 guns.

These returns are not complete. Thousands o arms, in addition, have been distributed throughout the Commonwealth, and thousands more will have been distributed by to-morrow morning.

HARRISBURGH, Tuursday, Sept. 11,

Fears are entertained for the safety of Capt. PALMER and the troop of mounted scouts, who, when last heard from, were in the neighborhood of Hagerstown, procuring information of the enemy's movements.

Hagerstown is now occupied by a large force of rebel cavalry. They were in possession of the telegraph office, and had commenced tearing up the track of the Franklin Railroad.

A cavalry raid is expected at Chambersburgh, and many citizens are preparing to leave. Force enough, if is expected, will be there to check the cavalry raid.

Gen. REYNOLDS, of the Pennsylvania Reserve Corps, is expected to arrive here to-night, to assume active command of all forces for the defence of the Valley and Harrisburgh.

AFFAIRS IN SUSQUEHANNAH.

SUSQUEHANNAH, Penn., Thursday, Sept. 11.

Susquehannah is awake! The citizens of this place held a meeting last night and formed a company in accordance with the order of Gov. CURTIN. Over ninety men signed the roll, and hold themselves in readiness to march to the field of battle at an hour's notice. Susquehannah is fully aroused.

EXCITEMENT IN SOUTHERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

YORK, Sept. 10, 1862.

All along the Northern Central and the York and Gettysburgh Railroads, the wildest excitement prevails. There is not a little village hamlet, of ever so humble pretensions, that does not boast its band of patriots, who are drilling and otherwise making preparations for resistance to State invasion, and protection of the General Government.

There are rumors of a very unreliable character constantly in circulation respecting the rapid advance of the rebels. Your correspondent was positively informed at Columbia last night that the rebels were in possession of York, and were occupying the place with a force of fifteen thousand. That there are many scouting parties of rebel cavalry ranging through the country in this vicinity I cannot doubt; but I am seriously inclined to think I shall find no rebels in Hanover, whither I go this morning. Instead of the rebels being in pursuit of me, as I expected, the tables are turned, and I am in pursuit of the rebels.

Reports are constantly being received of bridges burned, crops destroyed, cattle driven off, and, in some instances, citizens murdered. Many of these reports are undoubtedly true, but they are not applicable to this immediate neighborhood.

Although this city has sent hundreds to the war, still, within a very short time, seven companies of infantry and one cavalry company have been raised.

REBEL CAVALRY AT MIDDLETOWN.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

MIDDLETOWN, Md., Monday, Sept. 8—5 P. M.

A party of rebel cavalry, under Capt. MOTTER, formerly of this place, made a dash through Middletown, about noon, tearing down the only American flag exhibited, and swearing and cheering vociferously.

They committed no other outrages, and after being entertained at RIDDLEMOSER's Hotel, they left the place amid the imprecations of the people. At 4½ o'clock they came back, but this time as prisoners, in charge of a squad of COLE's Maryland Cavalry, who had bagged the rebels just after they had left the town. The Union scouts were under the command of Capt. RUSSELL.

The people, especially the females, were wild with enthusiasm, rendered the more intense by the despondency which preceded it. It is likely the rebels would have escaped, had it not been for the generous manner in which RIDDLEMOSER treated them, a number of them being so drunk that they overstaid their time.

The rebels boasted that Gens. FLOYD and LORING were in Hagerstown, and would soon be in Pennsylvania, but were very uncharitable in their comments upon the thievish propensities of the former.

DISPOSITION OF THE REBEL FORCES.

From the Baltimore American, of yesterday.

We have some later intelligence this morning from the rebel lines, which indicate that whatever may have been the purposes and intentions of the rebel chiefs in crossing the Potomac and seizing Frederick, that they are now closely hugging the Potomac, and with the exception of cavalry demonstrations and picket guards, their whole army is massed between Frederick and the river.

Gen. McCLELLAN here confronts them with a large army, his line extending from the Potomac to a point considerably north of the Baltimore road, and protecting even Westminster and other portions of Carroll County from the cavalry raids of the enemy. He has so thoroughly encompassed them that they must either cross the river again or meet him in a deadly conflict on the banks of the Potomac.

The great body of the enemy was massed near New-Market, on the Baltimore Road, and at Urbana, on the Georgetown road, the latter under Gen. LEE, and the former under Gen. JACKSON. This was their position on Monday, but JACKSON has since advanced on Hagerstown and occupied it yesterday.

To have accomplished anything either in the direction of Baltimore or Washington, this movement of the enemy must necessarily have been a rapid one. The five days that have elapsed since they entered Frederick, and the retiring of their lines eight or ten miles from Washington, within that time, may be regarded as an abandonment of such a purpose. They are now evidently endeavoring to draw Gen. McCLELLAN as far as possible from Washington in pursuit of them, so as to cross the army in readiness on the other side, between him and Washington, and thus get in his rear. The plan of the rebels was doubtless framed with the expectation that Gen POPE would be in command, but of course Gen. McCLELLAN cannot be caught in any such trap.

OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTER FROM ROCKVILLE.

The Force of Rebels which Crossed the Potomac—Movements of Our Forces—The Occupation of Poolesville, Mechanicsville Brookeville and Cocksville—Movements of Rebel Cavalry—The Rebels in a Close Place.

ROCKVILLE, Md., Monday, Sept. 8, 1862.

Parties coming direct from Poolesville and Barnesville, report that a large force of rebels under JACKSON crossed the Potomac last Thursday at a point near the mouth of the Monocacy River. On the following day another force, under LONGSTREET, crossed at the same point. Gen. PLEASANTON, Chief of Cavalry, has received information corroborating the above statement. It is estimated that the rebels have no less than 50,000 men on the Maryland side of the Potomac.

Last Friday night a few rebel cavalry made their appearance in Mechanicsville, but were driven away the next morning by a portion of the Second United States Cavalry.

Yesterday, our cavalry pushed on from Darnestown to Poolesville. They met with no opposition at Poolesville.

This morning our forces occupying Poolesville, Mechanicsville, Brookville and Cocksville, the right of the line resting on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at a point near Sykesville. The railroad between Sykesville and Frederick is in possession of the enemy.

As far as can be ascertained, the rebel infantry do not venture on the eastern side of the Monocacy River. They are concentrating in force at the Point of Rocks. This information is reliable. The rebel cavalry are scouring the country between Frederick and that portion included within our lines. On Friday, 600 rebel cavalry were at Barnesville. I learn from a gentleman, a schoolteacher, who left Barnesville, last Thursday, that, as a general thing, the inhabitants of that place are disloyal to the Union. He and a few others, who dared to assert their preference for the Union, were threatened with shooting. Upon the near approach of the rebel forces, the excitement and animosity became more dense, until at length the loyal citizens deemed it prudent to escape from the town.

At Poolesville a strong rebel feeling was manifest. Of course, this feeling at once subsides when our troops enter the place. At Rockville the majority of the people favor secession. A man named FOX, living between Rockville and Darnestown, has in his cellar three barrels of whisky, which he intends for the benefit of JACKSON and his followers when they shall have occupied the town. The present appearance of things render it extremely doubtful that JACKSON will soon have an opportunity of partaking of his friend's hospitality.

The public is, doubtless, eager to learn what preparations are being made by us to resist the demonstration of the rebels, or to commence defensive operations. Judging from events, hourly transpiring, the rebels will find it an extremely difficult matter to penetrate far into the interior of Maryland, and much too hazardous to attempt to recross the Potomac into Virginia. If we have Generals, who will not, as at Bull Run, refuse to lead their men into action, but go forward and inspire them with valor, we shall soon meet with success. WHIT.

LETTER FROM POOLESVILLE.

The Gallant Affair with the Rebel Cavalry—How the Rebels were Entrapped—List of Killed and Wounded—Fright of the People of Poolesville—The Cavalry Pushing On.

POOLESVILLE, Md., Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1862.

As previously stated, our cavalry occupied the town of Poolesville yesterday, but on the same night retired about two miles on the road to Dawsonsville' for the purpose of allowing the rebel cavalry to again enter the town, so that our own might have an opportunity of taking them prisoners.

The ruse was successful, and at abont 2 P. M. yesterday Companies A and B, of the Third Indiana Cavalry, under the command of Major CHAPMAN, followed by one section of ROBINSON's United States Battery, proceeded to reënter Poolesville, upon the main road leading from Rockville. When within a short distanco of the town, it was discovered that a force of 200 rebel cavalry was drawn up in line of battle in an open field at the northern limits of the town, and a half a mile to the right of the buildings.

Major ROBINSON ordered the section of battery to be placed in position upon a slight eminence at the southern extremity of Poolesville, and from this point a few rounds of shell were thrown among the rebel troops. The position of the pieces was then changed, and they were advanced into the town and brought to bear from a point on the Barnesville road. By this time the rebels had commenced retreating. The rebels replied with one piece. The first shot fired from our guns struck the rebel piece, but did not disable it. The second shot hit a horse, killing him instantly.

Companies A and B of the Third Indiana Cavalry subsequently charged upon the rebels, and after a brief, but sharp, contest, succeeded in compely routing them. The contending parties had a hand-to-hand conflict, first with pistols, then with sabres. The rebels finally fled in a northwesterly direction. The skirmish lasted nearly two hours. During that time our two pieces fired nineteen rounds. The rebels had eight or ten killed and several wounded—besides a number of horses killed. The Federals had one killed and eleven wounded, and eight or ten horses shot. They captured eighteen of the rebel cavalry. The following is a list of the Federal killed and wounded, with the exception of three names, which I could not ascertain at the time:

Sergeant David A. Fallis, Co. A—killed.
J. L. Eblin, Co. A—wound in the back.
F. D. Wood, Co. A—hand.
Wm. Stephens, Co. A—face.
Sergeant H. D. Banta, Co. A—head and arm.
B. Workman, Co. A—head.
Lieut. Lahue, Co. B—badly.
Lieut. B. Davis, Co. B—leg.
F. Rivers, Co. B—slightly.

The above injured were attached to the cavalry. The rebel prisoners were marched to Washington last night.

During the time our battery was firing from its first position the inhabitants of Poolesville were greatly terror-stricken, and many of the women took refuge in the cellars of their dwellings. The excitement was enhanced from the fact that some of the missiles passed directly over the houses.

It has been repeatedly asserted, and with much truth, that the majority of the citizens in Poolesville are Secessionists. There can be no doubt that aid and valuable information has been recently given the rebels through their sympathizers here. As a general thing, the women keep within doors, and view the soldiers through partially closed blinds. The men assemble round the principal grocery-store of the place, and discuss the probable strength of the two armies, and the events that are likely to transpire. Some of the citizens state that the rebels are moving toward Baltimore, and others declare that they saw regiments recrossing the Potomac into Virginia. They either know nothing concerning the rebel movements, or are endeavoring to deceive us by giving false information. Fortunately' Gen. PLEASANTON has other sources for obtaining the requisite knowledge.

To-day Poolesville is picketed by the Sixth United States Cavalry. Barnesville, eight miles above, is also occupied by our cavalry. The intention is to push forward our cavalry to-night until they meet the rebels. As a natural consequence this will occasion another skirmish, which will probably take place not far from Barnesville, it being reported that some five or six hundred of the rebel cavalry are hovering in that vicinity.

The Eighth Illinois Cavalry, Col. FARNSWORTH, took eight prisoners, including one Lieutenant and two Sergeants, at Barnesville to-day. They belong to the Twelfth Virginia Cavalry. Capt. FARNSWORTH, of Company K, Eighth Illinois Cavalry, captured the regimental flag of the Thirteenth Virginia Cavalry. It is blue and red and bordered with orange. It contains thirteen stars. The staff bears the sabre cut it received at the hands of Capt. FARNSWORTH. It is also said that the staff was formerly in the possession of the Nationals. WHIT.

LETTER FROM BARNESVILLE.

Occupation of the Place by our Cavalry—Another Brisk Skirmish—Several Rebels Killed, Wounded and Taken Prisoners.

BARNESVILLE, Md., Tuesday Night, Sept. 9, 1862.

This morning, the Third Indiana and the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, the entire force under command of Col. FARNSWORTH, of the latter troop, left Poolesville, and proceeded toward Barnesville. Upon approaching Monocacy Church, the cavalry discovered the rebel vedettes guarding the cross roads. Col. FARNSWORTH at once distributed his force, sending Companies A and B, of the Third Indiana, on the road leading toward Nolansville, and other companies in other directions. Companies A and B, under command of Maj. CHAPMAN, pursued the rebel vedettes for some distance on the road to Nolansville, and succeeded in taking the regimental flag of the Twelfth Virginia Cavalry, and eight prisoners. During the fight, the rebels lost three men killed. The companies then joined their squadron, and the entire force pushed forward into the town of Barnesville. Before reaching the town, however, they met with another small force of rebel cavalry, and after a few shots had been exchanged, the rebels fled, leaving in our hands seven more of their men prisoners. The rebels also sustained an additional loss of five men killed. In the whole affair, we had none killed, and only one man wounded.

To-night, the Eighth Illinois and the Third Indiana occupy the town.

The prisoners state that it is the intention of JACKSON to proceed in the direction of Baltimore. This is the interpretation given to the rebel feints and demonstrations by our military leaders, judging from the distribution of our infantry forces. The rebels are believed to be some distance from this place to-night. Twenty-three prisoners were taken at Barnesville to-day.

LETTER FROM HAGERSTOWN.

Middletown Occupied by the Rebels—Martial Law Declared—Flight of the Union Residents, &c.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1862.

Middletown, eighteen miles distant, was occupied by the rebels this morning, about two hundred taking formal possession and declaring martial law.

In anticipation of such an event, many of the Union residents, whose names had been forwarded by their secession neighbors to Frederick, left the previous evening and early in the morning, thus escaping the draft the rebels are said to be enforcing from the enrolled lists taken from the National officer, although they claim to have come here to protect Marylanders from the National draft. Most of the refugees came to this city, but finding the people here exercised about their own safety, they kept on into Pennsylvania, every avenue of travel being clogged with conveyances.

It is also feared that the rebels will cross at Antietam Ford, eight miles above Harper's Ferry, and alter reducing that stronghold, attack this place.

The troops from Pennsylvania have not yet arrived although they are hourly expected.

LATER FROM DARNESTOWN.

The Rebels Beaten Out of Poolesville—The Advance upon Pennsylvania.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

DARNESTOWN, Md., Monday, Sept. 8—1 P. M.

Our cavalry had a skirmish with the rebel cavalry, four hundred strong, and drove them out of Poolesville, yesterday. We had one killed and a few wounded. We now occupy the town. The advance of the rebels is reported to be pushing on toward the Pennsylvania line, while an inferior body of infantry and cavalry seem to be holding in check our advance on the Poolesville line. As affairs now look they will beat our time to Harrisburgh. Our forces have just been ordered forward, and Gen. BURNSIDE is already on the march, in chase of the enemy. A large part of the most efficient portion of the army has congregated in this neighborhood, while the Confederate army have been foraging in the rich valleys above, and threatening Pennsylvania. It looks as if they intended to dictate terms to us in Philadelphia or Harrisburgh. We move as if paralyzed by some strange apathy. Gen. McCLELLAN's headquarters were at Rockville until yesterday. He has now changed them further in advance. The rebels seem to have their own way in everything.

LETTER FROM ROCKVILLE.

The Enemy's Movements—How the National Lines are Constructed—Gen. McClellan on the Left, Gen. Burnside in the Centre and Gen. Wool on the Right—Condition of the Men.

ROCKVILLE, Md., Monday, Sept. 8, 1862.

Since mailing my letter of yesterday I have learned some important items of the enemy's movements which may have reached you through other sources.

The forces of LONGSTREET and JACKSON, including cavalry and artillery, and variously estimated from thirty to fifty thousand strong, crossed at Conrad's, Edwards' Ferry and other places, on Friday and Saturday, without opposition. As early as Thursday a cavalry force occupied Poolesville and captured and paroled some dozen of our cavalry. The latter seemed rather too much pleased with the operation to reflect much credit upon the fighting character of the Union cavalry. Nobody was hurt. The enemy were in possession of Poolesville up to Sunday, when a cavalry regiment sent by Gen. PLEASANTON were to have driven them out. I have not heard particulars. The body of the enemy moved up the river, and off toward Frederick,—which place they have also occupied. Sugar-loaf Mountain, which our signal corps held, has been captured, and is now occupied by the rebel army, where they have established their own signal operations. Canal boats which were passing up have been fired on, and it is presumed many of them have been captured. Supplies are the great object sought by the rebels. They are barefooted, ragged and hungry, but well armed and desperate. Shall such a "horde"—(Mr. DAVIS will please excuse me for appropriating the term)—dictate terms to the great Army of the Potomac, &c., &c.? The extreme left, our present defensive line, viz.: that along the river and turnpike leading to Poolesville and Frederick, is held by SUMNER, BANKS, FRANKLIN, PORTER, COUCH and SYKES' regulars. The centre, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad line, by BURNSIDE's Army Corps, and other ample forces, and the right, by Gen. WOOL. The new levies from Pennsylvania, New-York, and other States, will find early and active employment in defending the line of the Susquehanna, should the legions of JACKSON and LONGSTREET incline to march on the city of Brotherly Love. Judging from the immense forces passing up on the left, I think the main attack is expected in this direction. Our lines yesterday only extended to Darnestown, the cavalry pickets and scouts operating as far as Poolesville. I must correct the statement in my previous letter that the citizens of the latter place fired on our men. I am glad to be able to contradict that statement.

Much of the first rebel demonstrations in the upper part of the State was made by sympathizing citizens who have mounted their barbed steeds to fright the souls of fearful (Yankee) adversaries. The insurrection has not yet become very general, though desperate efforts will be made to raise the entire State.

The troops march with alacrity, and seem in good spirits. Last evening I saw a whole company belonging to a Pennsylvania regiment reverently kneeling upon the ground at their evening devotion. They had just bivouacked for the night, after a weary and dusty march. It was in a grove of majestic trees, which resounded with strains of sacred music and the voice of prayer intermingled. The bright beams of a full moon fell upon the prostrate soldiers through the open branches, and seemed like the beaming face of Deity giving answers of peace to the weary soul. I have seldom witnessed a more impressive scene.

LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

Rumors of Military Movements—Purposes of the Rebels—Their Expectations Not Realized—Spies in the City—An English War Steamer in the Harbor, &c.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, Sept. 10, 1862.

We have had the usual number of rumors today in regard to military movements in Maryland, but I hear of nothing sufficiently reliable to be communicated. The Secessionists are busy with a report that BURNSIDE has been repulsed, with the loss of many guns, and the Unionists are finding corresponding comfort in a rumor that the rebels have been driven from Frederick. Neither statement receives much credence even from those who circulate it, and the city has been, on the whole, more quiet and free from false alarms than any day for a week.

The purpose of the rebel entrance into Maryland is gradually becoming more apparent, though the mystery enshrouding their plans is not yet wholly dispelled. In addition to obtaining supplies and laying in wait for raids into Pennsylvania, they had hoped to make Frederick a recruiting station for the Southern army, drawing about them thousands of sympathizers from this State. I have reason to think that they have not met their expectations in this way, though many have, no doubt, joined them, and I hear of one company of 130 going from a single town, armed and equipped at their own expense. They have purposely left communication with them free and open, and adopted this conciliatory policy to encourage enlistments into their ranks. But, while they have been gaining in this way, they have lost from the desertion of some of their Maryland troops, who have taken this opportunity to escape the ill-requited hardships of the Confederate service. I hear of the reappearance in Baltimore of some who had left here at different times to enter the rebel ranks. They are, of course, keeping out of sight, and it may be playing the rôle of spies rather than deserters, as an offset to their arrival. Others have disappeared from here in the direction of Frederick, whether to continue among the rebels, or simply to compliment them with a visit of sympathy, does not appear.

An English war steamer, carrying ten light guns, entered the harbor to-day. The French steamer Gassendi, has been here for some days. She is a dilapidated specimen of naval architecture, and appears to great disadvantage by the side of some of our trim built Yankee craft.

JOHN ROSS, the Cherokee Chief, is here with his suite at the Eutaw House.

The private residence of Hon. REVERDY JOHNSON, adjoining the Gilmer House, in Calvert-street, has been taken by the Government, and is, to-day, occupied by the Medical Department as an office. The house has been in charge of servants only during the past year, Mr. JOHNSON having another residence in the country as well as at Washington.

The Baltimore papers are disturbed by the allusions in the New-York journals to Frederick as the Capital of Maryland, thinking it gives undue importance to the rebel movement. Annapolis is, as it has been, the Capital of this State.

A BATTLE IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Town of Washington Attacked by the Rebels.

THEIR REPULSE WITH HEAVY LOSS.

Explosion of the Magazine on Board the Gunboat Picket.

Twenty Men Killed and Six Wounded.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, Sept. 10.

By the arrival of the steamer Guide, from Newbern, we learn that the rebels, 1,200 strong, attacked Washington, N. C., on the morning of the 6th inst.

After a desperate fight of two hours, the rebels were repulsed and pursued seven miles.

The gunboat Louisiana rendered essential service in shelling the rebels out of the strong position they had seized.

The gunboat Picket was blown up by an accidental explosion of her magazine. Capt. NICHOLS and nineteen men were killed and six wounded.

Our loss on shore was seven killed and forty-seven wounded.

Thirty rebels were killed, and thirty-six taken prisoners.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, Sept. 10.

The rebels surprised the town of Washington, N. C., at daybreak on the morning of the 6th inst., but were repulsed after two hours' desperate fighting, as stated in a previous dispatch.

The First Regiment of North Carolina Union Volunteers, under Col. POTTER, fought with the greatest bravery and most determined heroism.

Col. POTTER had a horse shot under him.

Companies B and D, of the Twenty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment, were in the action. None of them were killed. Several, however, were wounded.

Our force engaged was only five hundred.

In addition to our killed and wounded, we have four men missing.

A large number of the rebels were wounded.

Gen. FOSTER and Staff went to Washington, N. C. on Sunday.

Col. STEVENSON will have command of Newbern in Gen. FOSTER's absence.

The Third New-York Volunteers arrived here last evening, and proceeded to their camp at Hampton.

BENEFIT OF MR. J. W. WALLACK, JR.—This evening Mr. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., has a benefit at the Winter Garden. "Fazio" and "Black-Eyed Susan" will be played. Mr. WALLACK is one of the finest actors in legitimate drama and "character" parts now on the stage, and a discriminating public can scarcely fail to appreciate and sustain him.

AFFAIRS IN EUROPE.

OUR PARIS CORRESPONDENCE.

The American and Italian Questions—The Official Press at Fault—Persigny—The Empress and the Priests in the Ascendancy—Rupture of the Entente Cordiale between France and England—A New Pamphlet, &c.

PARIS, Friday, Aug. 29, 1862.

The grave events now passsing in Italy naturally occupy the greatest share of public attention at Paris. It is nevertheless reported and credited, in well-informed circles, that as late as ten days ago the Emperor still expressed more concern about American than about Italian affairs—for the reason, as is alleged, that complications in America will cost more, on account of the distance, than complications in Italy; and the French exchequer just now, as every one knows, will not bear any lengthened depletion. But however lightly His Majesty may have spoken of the Italian movement a week or a fortnight ago, the events which have since occurred most probably have modified his opinions on the comparative gravity of the two questions. For with the passage of GARIBALDI into Calabria, an event which occurred four days ago, it would seem like folly not to admit that the gravest events even for France may arise.

In the confusion of ideas and the contradictions which you will find in the columns of the semi-official Press, you will not be able, perhaps, to arrive at any conclusion in regard to the Emperor's policy, or as to the probable course of events in Italy. For, while the Moniteur declares with a flourish of trumpets that the French Government can never yield to the "impudent threats" of GARIBALDI—a proposition which no one doubted—the journal of M. DE LA GUERONNIERE, La France, declares that the occupation of Rome is to be indefinite, and the Constitutionnel, the Patrie, and the Pays, declare, on the contrary, that such a doctrine is monstrous, and that while it is the duty of the French army to protect the Pope from the attacks of GARIBALDI, it is the duty of the French Government also to give the Italians an assurance that their legitimate desires for the unity of their country are soon to be realized.

Thus while the Government, through the official organ, makes a declaration which leaves the future in the dark, only promising what everybody naturally supposed—the defence of Rome against the present movement, one of the semi-official journals is frankly clerical and reactionary, while the three others are in favor of fixing a day in the immediate future at which Rome is to be evacuated. The explanation of this diversity is this: the note of the Moniteur confirms the general belief that the future policy of the Government on the Roman question is one of hazard and is not fixed; the journal of the Viscount DE LA GUERRONNIERE is the special organ of the Empress and the clericals; while the three other semi-official papers are simply the organs of the Minister of the Interior, who controls them, and who instructs them to support the cause of union in Italy and the cause of disunion in America.

The Moniteur, on account of the pretensions of the three last papers, has often been obliged to declare that there were no semi-official papers in France, and that no paper but itself had a right to claim to speak for the Government. This, of course, is the exact truth, and when the Constitutionnel, the Patrie and the Pays attack the American Union and people, as they do daily, or when they declare that the occupation of Rome is not going to be long persisted in, they are doing the bidding of a Minister and not of a Ministry, and are so little the organs of the Ministry as a whole, that a majority of its members, on the American question at least, are opposed to the policy of the Minister of the Interior. Moreover, it is said that certain of the colleagues of this Minister complain of the direction he has given to the Press on the American question, and especially of the violence of language which he appears to encourage. But while M. DE PERSIGNY cannot control the votes of his colleagues, he yet has rights in the Ministry from priority and a long and devoted service to the Emperor and the country, which constitute him a power in the Government, and render him, as nearly as possible, absolute in his own department. As regards the journal La France, it is said to receive its inspirations direct from the Empress through M. DE LA GUERONNIERE, a fact which at first gave the idea that it was controlled in the Emperor's private cabinet, but which has been authoritatively denied. The course of this journal in sustaining the Papal party is thus explained. As to the smiles it offers to the rebellion in America, we are left to conjectures, but imagine that, with an effort, the explanation would not be hard to find.

To return to the affairs of Italy, the friends of unity in France are in despair for the moment, for they believe that on this subject the Empress is in the ascendency. Her Majesty assists now at the Cabinet Councils, and if the Emperor is taciturn and impassible on these important occasions of State, the Empress, if the current talk be true, is neither; and as Her Majesty's opinions on the Papal question are very decided, the friends of Italy naturally attribute the hesitation of the Government to her influence. It is not outside the province of a woman to stand up as the advocate of a church and a religion in which she believes; and when that advocate is so charming a woman as the Empress EUGENIE, her opponents may well tremble at her influence. The friends of Italian unity in France are, therefore, in despair, and see no immediate hope for the realization of the great work.

On the other hand, the republicans appear to be confident that if GARIBALDI is forced to raise the standard of the republic, and if any large proportion of the people of Italy should join him, that a movement in the same sense would certainly follow in France. Of course, at present there is no indication of such a movement; there is nothing to prove that the present dynasty is not as firmly seated for many years to come as any dynasty could be; but Paris is France, and history is there to demonstrate what one day's excitement may do in the atmosphere of this inflammable and inconstant city. The army also, the republicans say, is not as sure for the Government as is generally believed; the Guard especially is represented as indifferent on account of the way in which promotions take place. The confidence of the army in its leaders, too, is said to extend to but a few of these, who cannot of course be everywhere at once. But all these assertions are but the preface to a contingency, which contingency may never arise. The most dangerous feature of the present condition of things in Italy to the Emperor of France is the new attempts at assassination which may grow out of it.

The Patrie of last evening asserts that such explanations have been sent to Turin as will be satisfactory to the King of Italy, and that the reinforcements to be sent to Rome will not surpass a regiment of infantry, a battalion of cavalry, and a small increase of artillery. If this be true, it indicates that the French Government has at last made the promise for the evacuation of Rome, which the majority of the people have been demanding. A week ago it was said, in diplomatic circles, that the Emperor had counseled VICTOR EMANUEL to hasten to Naples with his court and to establish himself there, and remain till he had subdued GARIBALDI and the Bourbons, and that when tranquility under VICTOR EMANUEL should be permitted to occupy Rome. We shall probably soon know whether the Emperor has taken any steps toward a solution of the question or not.

The antagonistic attitude of England in Italy and at Constantinople, has again awakened the prejudices and the alarms of the French, and on all sides we hear the cry—so considerately hushed up since the war in the Crimea—of "Perfidious Albion!" In Italy the English are urging GARIBALDI against the French, while at Constantinople the two powers are in open rupture on the delicate and dangerous Eastern question. The famous alliance appears to be on the point of a rupture.

The Secessionists continue to plead their cause before the French public. The following advertisement appears in the French papers: "A distinguished diplomat, M. EDWIN DE LEON, has just published, at the house of DENTU, under this title: The Truth on the Confederate States of America, a pamphlet to which the events of the moment lend a lively interest." On the title page of the pamphlet we learn that Mr. DE LEON is the "Ex-diplomatic Agent and Consul-General of the United States for Egypt and its dependencies." In this pamphlet Mr. DE LEON informs his French readers that he went some months ago from Paris to Richmond, in order to ascertain the true state of things in the South, and to be able to write with a full knowledge of the subject. But Mr. DE LEON does not, perhaps, know that during his absence his arguments have been repeated some dozens of times in the organs of the Press devoted to the same cause, and without, as the sequel has proved, producing any effect upon the march of events in Europe. His first argument is against the looseness of the blockade; witness the ease with which he ran in and out again. The taking of Fort Donelson, he says, aroused the whole South, and converted it into one solid army. New-Orleans was captured because the river at that moment was so high as to sweep away the barriers which had been placed in the current, and because the gunboats of the enemy were so elevated by the flood as not to be in view of the shore gunners, while able, however, to command the banks. But this capture did not profit the Federals, for 3,200 bales of cotton and large quantities of sugar and molasses were burnt before they arrived. (Like most Southerners, Mr. DE LEON seems to cling to this singular argument about the voluntary destruction of property.) The army of the South, while probably equal in numbers to that of the North, is commanded by better officers. The war, therefore, is more likely to be carried into the Northern States than into the Southern. The resources of the North are exaggerated: the Treasury is on the point of becoming bankrupt. Its commerce only exists in name. Its new prohibitive tariff has raised a Chinese wall between it and exterior commerce. Its army is composed for the most part of foreign mercenaries commanded by the refuse of the Old World, and the subtle lawyers and politicians of Massachusetts and New-York. The rivalities of different cities and sections, the crowds of corrupt speculators, the general want of confidence, the disorganization of the Government at Washington, the probable speedy crumbling of the colossus with the feet of clay—such is the real tableau of the much vaunted "resources" of the Yankee nation. The Yankees are strongest on the sea, because the naval officers of the South, in resigning, handed over, with an honor really chivalric, the vessels under their command. The South has plenty of arms—some obtained from abroad but the majority at home. The negroes which were reported in the North to be armed by their masters were only companies armed with scythes going to their labor in the fields. It is said that the South can be starved out, but any man conversant with the country knows better. The slaves can furnish the country all the grain and provisions required, while their masters are defending the soil. Certain articles of luxury are of course dear. Hard drinking has almost entirely ceased. The negroes are not a source of weakness to the South. The negro is devoted to his master, attached to the place of his birth, and cannot be corrupted. The conduct of the negro during this bloody struggle has been devoted to such a point that, if some measures necessary to the amelioration of his condition are to be taken, their masters will be the first to take this step, without, however, driving them from the soil where they were born, into some other country, as is proposed by the Abolitionists of the North. The question of Slavery enters in no way into the present struggle, although the North has adroitly, in order to give the change to public opinion in Europe, taken this pretext for the war. The real source of the present difficulties is found in questions of a purely industrial character; the North is manufacturing, while the South is agricultural. To these causes ought to be added the differences of race and of aptitude which exist between the two peoples. The North is peopled by the Anglo-Saxon race; the South by the Latin race. But such of the Anglo-Saxon race as are found in the South, are descended from the nobility banished under CROMWELL. The North has drawn to it all the starving and discontented revolutionists of Germany, all the Red Republicans, nearly all the Irish emigrants, to fill up the ranks of its army. The North hates and abuses the negro race. Let Europe consider these facts, and the governments will soon follow public opinion and recognize the South."

These are the principal heads of Mr. DE LEON'S pamphlet. He has had the good taste not to attack the private character of the men and women of the North, like some of his predecessors, and he has placed in the front of his book a portrait of JEFFERSON DAVIS, so handsome that all womankind in Europe must henceforth give in to a cause led by such a chief. We suspect JEFF. will blush when he sees it.

M. MILLIROUX, a gentleman who has already published a pamphlet in the interest of secession, is out with another entitled, "Institutions and Manners of the Americans."

M. GEORGE FISCH has just published a considerable work on the Union side of the question, which, I understand, has been sent to New-York for reprint.

M. LABOULAYE, Member of the Institute and Professor of Comparative Legislation at the College of France, has also just published in the columns of the Journal des Débats a review of the works of M. DE GASPARIN and M. FISCH, running through several numbers, which is one of the ablest, if not the ablest, defence of the North which has yet been published abroad.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

The New Confederate Steamer—A Formidable Antagonist—British Capitalists taking the Field—The Cotton Famine Increasing—Belgium—Secessionists in the National Army—The Financial Crisis Postponed—The Feeling About the War—Conspiracies.

LONDON, Tuesday, Aug. 26, 1862.

As the British Government gives no sign of interference in American affairs, English capitalists appear to have taken the matter into their own hands. It is said that the iron-plated steamer, which left these shores a few days ago, and of which you will have probably heard before this reaches you, was purchased by the Southern Commissioners; but as she is reported to have cost some $7,000,000, it is hard to see where they got either the money or credit to purchase her.

It appears that this steamer was built for the British Government, but rejected as not up to contract. She is very large, can steam eighteen knots an hour, is covered with six-inch iron plates, and has an armament of which the heaviest guns are rifled 120-pounders. If the reports circulated here are true, she will be far the most formidable antagonist the American Navy has ever met with. Should English capitalists interested in cotton fit out half a dozen such steamers, as they can very easily, and take cotton for pay, when they can get it, you will find a use for all the iron-clad ships you are building. It is true that the steamer of which I have spoken may be the only one, and that not to be despised, but there is nothing improbable in a larger number; and I know not how otherwise to account for the high spirits of the Secessionists here, who hint of some terrible blow to be struck, and who speak confidently of the speedy return of peace, and of resuming their occupations in the South, and even in cities now occupied by National troops.

The cotton famine increases, and grows every day more gloomy, hopeless and threatening in its aspect. The Times has sent a special reporter into the district which suffers more by the war than any portion of America. The Autumn is at hand, and Winter is close upon us. The vast mass of manufacturing operatives and small traders, reduced to pauperism, are naked and starving but for the relief doled out to them. They must be warmed as well as fed. Long since they have pawned their clothing and blankets. They lie upon the floor. They have been used to a warm atmosphere and generous diet. They have been promised that the war would soon end, or that cotton would come from India and elsewhere. To-day they are told that the war in America must last for many months, and probably for years, and that no cotton is coming from any quarter. Patience for which they have been so praised, is nearly exhausted. Despair has come. What despairing men will do, when they number by the hundred thousand, we wait to see, and not without the apprehension of some great calamity.

It is not in England alone. There is a frightful distress in Belgium. The Queen of England sent $10,000 to Lancashire a few days ago. She has sent the same amount to Belgium. This shows what must be the distress there. In France, the Government has taken the matter upon its own broad shoulders. The manufacturers have been instructed to keep their works going, and to charge the loss to the Government. To find work for every Frenchman willing to labor is one of the functions of the Imperial Government. But, observe that the Government that does this must also consider an obstacle to industry or trade as an attack upon itself. If you injure a French manufacturer, you injure the Emperor. A war which deprives France of cotton, or a tariff which limits her trade, is an affair of State—not, as in England, a question of political economy.

The desertion and escape of a few thousand fugitives from the draft into Canada, or to England and Ireland, is not a misfortune. Of the few hundreds who have landed at Cork from the late steamers, all were Southern sympathizers, who would have done only mischief in a Northern army. No officer would willingly command soldiers whose first bullet would be fired at his head instead of the enemy. Unless opinion has changed very rapidly, there are thousands of Americans as well as Irishmen, in the North, liable to be drafted into the army, who will not add to its strength, but will take the first opportunity to desert to the Southern standard. And every such man, well got rid of, will add to the real strength of the Northern forces. It is to be feared that the cowards, the skulkers, and the stampeders, who have so often brought disaster and disgrace upon the National cause, have been those who volunteered from necessity, and have no heart in the cause they pretend to serve. One earnest Union man is worth a dozen of these half-way sympathizers with rebellion. If I am not strangely misinformed, there are officers of high rank, who are as open to these remarks as the common soldier.

The disappointment expressed here at the financial condition of the North is ludicrous. The Times has apologized to its readers for the non-fulfillment of its predictions. The crisis is postponed. It seems impossible for these people to understand that a country producing all the necessaries of life, and a large surplus for exportation, having the richest gold mines in the world, and a Government which has the entire confidence of the people, can get on without payments in specie. It is remarkable, however, that all the difficulty should be with the North. No wonder is expressed that the South should be highly prosperous without money or credit.

The feeling about the war is without change. It is one of suspense. Europe waits to see what will become of McCLELLAN, what will be done to POPE, and what will be the result of the conscription. The Western Democrats write of the great things they expect to do in the Fall elections. Some, in high positions, speak confidently of carrying some of the larger States, and of a plot to make overtures to join the Southern Confederacy. I can only hint obscurely at these matters, but they may soon become worthy of attention. There is no doubt that a deep plot exists to carry over Missouri, and there are Pennsylvanians in London who long since threatened to carry that State for the South, and hope to make Philadelphia the great entrepôt of Southern trade.

There are stories about a grand coup d'etat of Southern intervention—a sudden opening of the Southern ports by the French fleet now leaving for Mexico. There will be nothing of this. Whatever is done by France will be open and deliberate. Well disposed as we are told the Emperor is and has been toward the South, he will be in no haste even to acknowledge the Confederacy. When he takes that step, if ever, he will also give the South all needed assistance; but the now opening campaign may be fought out with no other interference than what may be given underhandedly by sympathizing English capitalists, with the connivance of the Government.

MONADNOCK.

Volunteering in the French Army.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Permit me to correct an erroneous assertion in your number of this morning, about our French Military system.

Speaking of bounties to volunteers, you say, "This measure is that adopted by the French Government, which has created the finest army in the world. Notwithstanding the constant resource of conscription, that government offers the enormous bounty of $500 to all those who voluntarily enlist in the old regiments.'

Now there is no such thing in our army, and never has a single dollar been paid out of the French Treasury to encourage enlistments.

What you mistake for a bounty to volunteers is merely the price paid to substitutes by the conscripts who wish to be exonerated from service. The government acts merely as a banker, receiving the money with one hand and paying it away with the other. The number of men acquired in this manner is determined by the number of those who have bought out their exemption, so that in the end this ransaction results only in filling up with substitutes the regular quota of each conscripting draft.

The voluntary enlistments are altogether different and independent from what I have just explained. No money consideration of any kind is attached to them. The volunteer has the right to choose his own corps, which the substitute has not; and he is, besides, entitled to more rapid advancement. These two inducements are the only ones which have ever been offered to promote enlistments in our army, and they have always proved sufficient to attract crowds of volunteers in time of war. E. MASSERAS.

COURRIER DES ETATS UNIS OFFICE, Sept. 8, 1862.

Operations of the Sanitary Commission—The Battles near Washington.

EFFICIENCY OF SURGEON-GENERAL HAMMOND—UNAVOIDABLE DEFICIENCIES—NEITHER CHLOROFORM OR STIMULANTS TO BE MAD FOR THE WOUNDED.

We are authorized to publish the following extracts from letters received from members of the Sanitary Commission, now actively employed in Washington and its neighborhood.

It is gratifying to observe that they bear the strongest testimony to the activity and ability of our Surgeon-General, Dr. HAMMOND. The temporary deficiency of medical stores for the wounded at Centerville was due to the capture of the depot by the enemy—for which the Medical Department is not in any way responsible.

"We started from Washington with our wagons laden with sanitary stores on Saturday evening, and reached the line of our army at the foot of Centreville Hills, at 9 o'clock next morning (Sunday, August 31st). It was a ride of only thirty miles, but we were delayed by the trains and crowds that were moving in both directions. At the summit of the hill, just this side of Centreville, I came upon a train of fifty or sixty ambulances stationed in the rear of one of the old rebel redoubts, the enemy's shells being expected every moment. On communicating with the surgeons on the ground, and with the wounded, I learned that there was a lamentable lack of medical and sanitary stores, the supplies having been cut off by the raids of the enemy. Forty-two wagons laden with medical stores had been captured at Manassas. Many of our wounded soldiers had been without food for two days, and were soon to start for Alexandria and Washington over a rough and stony road, at the mercy of the merciless and insubordinate ambulance drivers. My wagon-loads of crackers and of pure and honest stimulants were soon cheering the eyes and comforting the exhausted nerves of many. Some were arranged on the narrow couch of the ambulance, others lying on the wet ground with no covering above them or rubber cloths under them, waiting their turn, or looking anxiously to the nearest ambulance as to a haven of rest.

As the field of battle of Saturday was in the hands of the enemy, it was not possible, without much delay, to carry out the original plan of reaching the wounded still there, and it was the opinion that I would not be permitted to enter the lines of the enemy. The need of stores at Centreville and in the very streets (where surgical operations were going on, and the wounded lying about,) was so apparent that there was no question as to present duty. Most of the houses of that dilapidated village were already occupied as hospitals, and a room was not to be had. I therefore appropriated an old hay-rack and a section of the rough sidewalk for my depôt, and my boxes were soon arranged and opened. I had conferred with the Medical Director and with others of the Medical Corps, as they were hurrying through the town to and from their camps, so that a wise disposal of the supplies soon became a work of time only. Pressing inquiries came from all sides: "Have you stimulants, have you bandages, lint, dressings, splints, sponges, food, anything for the wounded?" And when my affirmative included beef tea, chocolate and condensed milk, you will appreciate the effect. The "interest of the occasion" was heightened by the fact that the street was crowded with wagon trains, regiments, stragglers, wounded, etc., and my depôt generally regarded as a sutler's stand—the consequence being that I was besieged by the rank and file in very unmilitary confusion to sell much of what I had, and more of what I had not. Of the latter, tobacco, I think, took the lead.

One melancholy question was asked me: "Have you any chloroform?" No stimulants and no chloroform at the headquarters of our army, thirty miles from the unfinished dome of the Capitol! Such are the accidents of war.

Not knowing how our return might be delayed, I retained a few eatables, which were readily disposed of the next morning, before reaching Alexandria, to the wounded and weary men by the roadside. I wished myself the master of a train of Sanitary stores. We were able to take back with us some of the wounded.

It was the only enjoyment of the day to see how well, and as a matter of every day business, the Surgeon-General was providing for the wounded. He started 5,000 convalescents for Northern hospitals, and in 36 hours every one of them is gone, and with a mattress under him. He got an order for 2,000 beds for the Capitol and 1,000 for the upper floor of the Patent office, and secured thirty or forty churches and dwelling-houses—among them CORCORAN'S, on Lafayette-square—for hospitals. He sent for his best army Surgeons who were North, and to Boston, New-York and Philadelphia for sixty more picked citizen volunteers. His accumulation of supplies enables these hospitals to be organized quickly and with little embarrassment."

The Death of Gen. Stevens—Feuds Among Army Officers.

WEST POINT, Friday, Sept, 5, 1862.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The brief remarks in Thursday's TIMES, on tee loss of Gen. ISAAC STEVENS were eminently just and judicious. The death of this highly gifted man and able soldier is a national misfortune. Among the many men who have passed under my eye since I have been connected with the Military Academy, and I now number in this class almost every General and Field Officer of the regular service now on active duty in the field, there is not one of whose abilities I had formed a higher estimate, while a pupil under me, than of Gen. STEVENS. My great regret in respect to his career was, that he should have quitted the military service, in which he had already distinguished himself, to throw himself into that most disappointing of all occupations, party politics. Even here he showed the same untiring zeal, the same ability as a leader, as he had done in his previous walk in life. Whenever his biography shall be faithfully given, it will afford much to encourage, and some things to warn able and ambitious youth.

It is not on this subject, however, that I commenced this letter to you. My principal object was to say a few words on the last part of the remarks referred to. Of the injustice of the imputations thrown out against Gen. STEVENS, with respect to the repulse at James Island, no one who knew him well had any doubt, and I question whether the author of them, who at bottom is a kind-hearted man, does not as sincerely regret them as any friend of this late gallant soldier. It is a sad thing that men who have perilled their lives side by side in their country's cause, who, on the battle-field, would have gone to the rescue of each other against any odds, should, in the calm hour of repose, harbor a thought even of enmity against each other. But so it is. The army and the navy are neither of them more free from private defamation than are the medical and clerical professions. It is a sad thing to say this; but it is a truth that should be spoken aloud, that it may be brought home to all who are concerned in it. Could officers know how they appear in the eyes of civilians; could they be made sensible of the irreparable injury they do to their professional prospects, by giving vent to personal feelings of the moment, against each other as individuals, or as members of particular branches of the service; they could not do otherwise than set their faces sternly against all who indulge in this odious practice.

That men, entering the service rather late and from civil life, who are comparatively strangers to each other, should so far forget what is due to themselves and to the good of the service, as to give way to petty bickerings, I can understand and in some degree excuse. But that men holding so prominent a place in the public eye and in general estimation, as do the graduates of the United States Military Academy—men nursed at the breasts of the same Alma Mater, whose chief claim to public confidence flows from this source—whose chief ground of pride is that they belong to a body who, although they have been taught to black their own boots, have not descended to lick those of others,—that these men, with every thing to bind them into one brotherhood, should sully their fair escutcheon by such acts, is incomprehensible to quiet, thoughtful lookers-on from without. As PERRY said, on a glorious occasion, of an unworthy brother officer, whom he ought to have stigmatized, "There is glory enough for all," so, at least, let the graduates of West Point do. If they must have offences among themselves—for "offences needs must come,"—let them, like wise members of the same family, have the dirty linen washed within the family inclosure. Could my words reach every ear of the army, I would say to the senior officers not to forget "that curses, like chickens, come home to roost;" to the juniors, to cease writing to friends croaking, complaining letters, denunciatory of their seniors, which, if seriously believed, would leave few with any reputation. He is no true soldier who, in generous rivalry, would not strive with the best to "pluck bright honor from the pale-faced moon;" nor he a true belted knight who, in this glorious struggle, would place a straw in the path of a comrade to baulk him in his well-aimed attempts.

For years gone by, I cherished the hope and often expressed it, whenever the loathed word disunion was spoken before me, that the natural effect of the Military Academy would be to wash down sectional prejudices, and add a new bond to keep all parts together. In this I have been disappointed to some extent; but this has not diminished my confidence nor hopein those who still struggle for it.

Respectfully, &c., D. H. MAHAN.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE WAR COMMITTEE.

Col. Charles Gould in Favor of the Press—Important Decisions.

Yesterday afternoon there was an adjourned meeting of the National War Committee, His Honor Mayor OPDYKE presiding.

The doings of this Committee are assuming grave National importance, and the people are desirous to know what men of influence and position propose for the relief of Government at this time; and, as a natural consequence, the papers have time and time in vain attempted to obtain the result of their deliberations.

Col. CHARLES GOULD, who has the sense to know that the Press will publish nothing that it should not, yesterday made a motion in favor of admitting reporters. This was opposed by the conservative members of the Committee for reasons best known to themselves.

After some discussion, the motion was laid over under the rule requiring one day's notice. To-day it will be brought up for discussion. Publicity, with several members of the Committee, appears to have no advocates.

Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD presented a report which alluded to the inefficient defences of the State in view of any contemplated hostilities of the rebels. The report stated that we had no ships of war, no forts, no army, except 20,000 uniformed militia, and recommended Gov. MORGAN to put the State in a condition of immediate defence, and arm and drill 500,000 men between the ages of 18 and 45.

The report was adopted and ordered to be published. It is to be presented to Gov. MORGAN.

The following letters have been received by the Committee:

No. 40 EXCHANGE-PLACE, NEW-YORK, Sept. 10, 1862.

DEAR SIR: On my return to the City last evening, after an absence of some days, I received the notice of my election as one of your Committee. Now, while I fully indorse the proceedings of your patriotic Committee, as far as they have come to my knowledge, and am ready and willing to do anything that may be reasonably asked to sustain them, I am constrained to decline acting, solely on the ground that the calls upon my time are such as to render it impossible for me to give the attention necessary to the faithful performance of so important a duty as must devolve upon the members of your Committee.

With respect, your obedient servant,

MORRIS E. KETCHUM.

WM. ORTON, Esq., Secretary National War Committee.

THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE BANK, NEW-YORK, Sept. 10, 1862.

John Austin Stevens, Jr., Esq., Secretary:

SIR: I thank your Committee for the honor of selecting me as a member, but I cannot, consistently with my position and duties, consent to accept. In saying this, I beg to assure the Committee of my most cordial and earnest sympathy with their organization and purpose. I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. S. COE.

After some discussion upon the best plan for raising troops for the duty of home drill, &c., the Committee adjourned until to-day.

The National War Committee of the Citizens of New-York and Gen. Fremont.

At a special meeting, held Sept. 10, a resolution was passed, in conformity with which the prior resolution of the Committee, the letter to Gen. FREMONT inclosing the resolution and his reply, the telegram to the Secretary of War, and his reply, are herewith published:

NATIONAL WAR COMMITTEE OF THE CITIZENS OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Sept. 10, 1862.

The National War Committee of the citizens of New-York having passed the annexed resolution on the 2d inst., in the hope that the names of the two Major-Generals mentioned, being the only two then in New-York and not on duty, would attract to the service of the country some persons who might not otherwise enter it immediately, and the following correspondence having thereupon taken place, and the answer of the War Department being accepted by this Committee as conclusive of its action, it is thereupon

Resolved, That no further action be taken under the said resolution, and that the same, together with the correspondence, be published.

Resolved, That Gen. FREMONT and Gen. MITCHEL be and are requested, if the Government will consent to organize in this State, without delay, a corps of fifty thousand men, and that application for such consent be made to the General Government, and if it refuses, then to the State Government.

Resolved, That all residents of this City, who are willing to join such a corps, be requested to communicate their names and residences to some member of this Committee.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 3, 1862.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose a copy of a resolution this day passed by the National War Committee of New-York, and to ask whether, if the Government consent, you will undertake the organization of a corps therein requested. Very respectfully yours,

GEORGE OPDYKE, Chairman.

Maj.-Gen. JOHN C. FREMONT.

COPY RESOLUTION.

Resolved, That Gen. FREMONT and Gen. MITCHEL be each requested, if the Government will consent, to organize in this State, without delay, a corps of 50,000 men, and that application for such consent be made to the General Government; and if it refuse, then to the State Government.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 5, 1862.

SIR: I have the honor to receive your note of the 3d inst., communicating to me a resolution passed by the National War Committee of New-York in relation to a corps of 50,000 men, and requesting to know, in the event that it have the sanction of the Government, if I would undertake its organization.

I thank the Committee for the honor of their invitation, and beg you to inform them that I would undertake the proposed duty with great pleasure.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. FREMONT, Maj.-Gen. U. S. A.

Hon. GEO. OPDYKE, &c., Chairman of Committee.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 4, 1862.

To the Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, Washington.

SIR: Will you consent that Gen. FREMONT and Gen. MITCHEL, each or either, shall organize in this State a separate corps of fifty thousand men, composed of citizens of this and other States, and allow the men received to be counted as part of the quota of the State from which they come, upon some of the calls for troops heretofore made by the President.

If you consent, we shall hope to induce the Generals to undertake the organization.

GEORGE OPDYKE,

Chairman National War Committee.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5, 1862.

George Opdyke, Mayor, No. 79 Fifth-avenue, New-York:

Your telegram of yesterday has received consideration of this Department. Gen. MITCHEL having been assigned to command the Southern Department must immediately join his command. Raising volunteers in New-York has been assigned to the Governor of that State, who is faithfully performing his duty; and there appears to be no reason for interfering with him.

To authorize military officers of high rank to raise and organize army corps would be productive of military disorganization.

This Department, therefore, cannot consent that any Major-General shall organize a separate corps.

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

The International Cricket Match.

The match between officers of the British Army, from Canada, and cricketers of the United States, was resumed yesterday morning, at Hoboken, with Lieut. Patten and Capt. Slade at the wickets, who were not out, and well in for 38 runs on the previous evening. The play was opened with great spirit on both sides, the fielding being sharp, and the bowling of Creighton—underhand—and Sadler—round-arm—quite effective, while H. Wright kept wicket; the result was that the change of bowling and ill luck on the part of some of the officers, together with some fine catches by the fielders, brought the innings to a close for 84 runs. In Lieut. Patten's 21 were three 4s, a 2 and singles, well got. Capt. Slade's 25 comprised a 4, three 3s, a 2 and singles, in obtaining which some very fine play was shown. Capt. Phillips played well for a 2 and three singles, and Capt. Beresford's 6 were got by a 2 and 4: the rest did nothing. Sadler's 5 wickets were obtained at an expenditure of 60 balls for 21 runs; Creighton's, 5 wickets for 60 balls and 19 runs. The United States sent in Messrs. Sharp and Hudson to the bowling of Messrs. Cholmely and Hamilton; the bowling was not up to the previous day's play, and it was consequently mastered by the batsmen, and Mr. Cholmely was changed for Capt. Slade, and again for Capt. Pemberton, who was remarkably fast, and at time s rather wide of the wickets—the byes counting up in consequence. Mr. Cholmely was again put on, and remained till the match terminated—as it did in favor of the United States, with five wickets to go down. Mr. Hamilton was not changed during the match. The wicket-keeping was in no way to be compared to that of the day previous, as Sharp ought to have been caught three times, H. Wright once, easy, and Mr. Gibbes once from a sharp chance. The fieldings were not as good as on the first day, with the exception of Capt. Phillips at point, whose fielding drew down repeated applause.

Sharp's score was made by steady batting, and counted a 4, 3, four 2s and singles. In Hudson's 9, were a 3 and two 2s got by his usual free hitting. Mr. Richard Stevens, of the Philadelphia Club, made some remarkably fine play for 15, in which was 5 out for 2, and a splendid drive to long-on for 5, which might have been a 6; another drive for 3, and a 2 and singles. Mr. Gibbes was well caught by Capt. Pemberton, his 13 being a fine display of cricket in all parts of the field, it including two 3s and a 2. So he put up an easy one to Capt. Pemberton at short-leg, and H. Wright brought out his bat after a splendid display of good cricket to all parts of the field; in his fine score were a 4, four 3s and two 2s.

The usual justice was done to a substantial cricketers' dinner, which was served up in the club house, and the grounds presented a much more lively appearance than on the first day, on account of the greater number of visitors present, among whom were the leading cricketers from Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New-York, Jersey, and other States, besides several from Montreal and many English gentlemen cricketers, who were attracted to the ground on account of the importance of the match.

The following is the score:

THE RETURN MATCH—MILITARY VS. UNITED STATES.

The Captains of the some Elevens arranged yesterday afternoon to commence the return match to-day at 11 o'clock, on the St. George's ground, Hoboken. It will occupy to-day and Saturday, and may very likely turn in favor of the Military, on account of the practice they have had against our last bowlers.

Movements of Troops.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF THE SEVENTH RHODE ISLAND.

Another splendid regiment from Gov. SPRAGUE'S small, but gallant State, passed through the City yesterday, on its way to the seat of war. Quite early in the morning—not much past 7 o'clock—this regiment, the Seventh Rhode Island, arrived. By 10 o'clock they were aboard the cars on the Camden and Amboy Railroad. The Tenth Rhode Island is a full regiment, mustering near a thousand men, and is magnificently armed and equipped. It is commanded by Col. ZENAS R. BLISS, who is a graduate of West Point, and has served as a Captain in the regular army. The Lieutenant-Colonel is W. E. SAYLES, formerly editor of the Providence Daily Post. The Major and other officers have smelt gunpowder. The Doctor has been a prisoner in Richmond, and is an efficient and experienced surgeon. Subjoined is a list of the field and staff:

Colonel—Z. R. Bliss.
Lieutenant-Colonel—Wilcom B. Sayles.
Major—Jacob Babbitt.
Adjutant—Charles F. Page.
Surgeon—Dr. James Harris.
First Assistant Surgeon—Dr. Gay'or.
Second Assistant Surgeon—Albert Sprague.
Quartermaster—D. S. Linnell.

THE CONNECTICUT TWENTIETH.

The Twentieth Connecticut Regiment also passed through New-York yesterday. It does credit to the State in which it was raised. Several weeks drill and discipline brought it up to a fine pitch of military condition. The following is a roster of its officers:

Colonel—Samuel Ross, Fourteenth Infantry, U. S. A.
Lieutenant-Colonel—Wm. B. Wooster, of Derby.
Major—Philo B. Buckingham, of Seymour.
Adjutant—Chas. J. Arms, of Norwich.
Quartermaster—Wm. T. Scranton, of New-Haven.
Surgeon—Wm. B. Casey, of New-Haven.
Assistant Surgeons—John W. Lawton, of Naugatuck; Daniel Jewett, of East Haddam.
Sergeant-Major—Ralph B. Thatcher, of Hartford.
Quartermaster-Sergeant—Chas. H. Clark, of Southington.
Commissary Sergeant—Chas. E. Kellogg, of Hartford.
Hospital Steward—John H. Nolan, of New-Haven.
Company A—Captain, Timothy Guilford, Cheshire; First Lieutenant, Wm. J. Bassett; Second Lieutenant, Elkanah Doolittle.
Company B—Captain, Sanford E. Chaffee, Derby; First Lieutenant, J. H. Doolittle; Second Lieutenant, Jas. Foley.
Company E—Captain, Henry O. Smith, Hartford county; First Lieutenant, Oliver H. Post; Second Lieutenant, Horace Williams.
Company D—Captain, F. A. Parker, Portland; First Lieutenant, Henry S Cadwell; Second Lieutenant, Archibald Campbell.
Company E—Captain, Samuel S. Woodruff; Southington; First Lieutenant, Andrew Upson; Second Lieutenant, Henry Lewis.
Company F—Captain, Henry C. Pardee, New Haven; First Lieutenant, Thos. B. Kirby; Second Lieutenant, David R. Brown.
Company G—Captain, William W. Morse, New Haven; First Lieutenant, Fitch T. Birdsall; Second Lieutenant, H. H. Barnes.

ed a very large attendance of families and friends of members of the regiment, among whom were many, very many, young and fair representatives of the gentler sex. The fact of Col. ALLEN's former connection with the Seventh Regiment brought many friends of that favorite corps, and, altogether, the assemblage was one of which any regiment might well be proud. About 3 P. M. the Legion was paraded, with nearly a thousand men in the ranks, and was reviewed by Col. ALLEN. They were without muskets, and only partially uniformed, but presented a very creditable drill in the marchings. At the conclusion of the parade, regimental line was formed at parade rest, when a series of presentations took place.

First, Mr. JOHN T. WILSON, of No. 72 Fulton-street, in this City, on behalf of his wife, presented to the regiment a beautiful National color and two guidons, all of which were made of silk, fringed with gold bullion and appropriately inscribed.

Second, Col. HIGGINS, on behalf of Col. ALLEN's old command, the First Regiment New-York Volunteers, presented the Colonel with a splendid sword, appropriately inscribed. The blade is of the finest Damascus steel. There are two scabbards, one for parade and one for service. The parade scabbard, and the sword-hilt, are beautifully mounted in gold and silver, and the whole affair got up in excellent taste.

Third, Mr. J. T. WILSON, on behalf of the officers of the regiment, presented Col. ALLEN with a fine horse, of Saladin stock, fully caparisoned.

The presentation speeches of Mr. WILSON and Col. HIGGINS were of commendable brevity, and in good taste. Col. ALLEN's replies were pithy, soldier-like and to the point. He elicited from the rank and file of the regiment the most enthusiastic approbation for the donors, and a determined expression of an intent to defend the colors with steel, with lead and with fire, and never to disgrace them.

Father BARRY, the Roman Catholic clergyman of Richmond (S. I.) Church, was introduced, and invited those of his persuasion (the Irish) to attend the offering of the holy sacrifice of Mass on Thursday morning next.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the hospitalities of the camp were extended to the guests, who visited in turn the Colonel's quarters, the Quartermaster's Department and the kitchen, and saw all that was to be seen. We might add a detailed account of a supplementary Court of Dover which was established, in which the most homogeneous spirit prevailed. The whole day passed off without the slightest unpleasant incident, and was a source of gratification to all who participated.

The rank and file are somewhat disconcerted at the failure to secure them the bounties and pay to which they are entitled, and which, but for the remissness of the State and United States authorities, they would have had long since. They are anxious to be paid before they leave.

The following are the officers of the first regiment:

Col. W. H. ALLEN, Lieut.-Col. Cle. T. H. Balling, Major R. L. Van Wagenen, Adjt. Wm. W. Horton, Quartermaster U. S. Lowe, Surgeon Wm. Rockwell, Capt. W. H. Jenner, First Lieut. Alex. B. Marston, Second Lieut. E. W. Marsh, Capt. Samuel T. Allen, First Lieut. Wm. H. Van Brunt, Second Lieut. Wm. H. Poole, Captain H. F. Penfield, First Lieutenant Charles F. King, Second Lieutenant Horace B. Thompson, Capt. James H. Brennan, First Lieut. George D. Farrar, Second Lieut. C. Fowler Brennan, Capt. Charles A. Du Moulin, First Lieut. James H. Connolly, Second Lieut. Charles L. Warner, Capt. David Toumey, First Lieut. James Flynn, Second Lieut. C. Calvin Jones, Capt. Abel S. Chappell, First Lieut. Huvla Morrison, Second Lieut. John G. Floyd, Capt. W. W. Badger, First Lieut. William Henderson, Second Lieut. David W. Palmer, Capt. Chauncey B. Sleeper, First Lieut. Charles P. Hanson, Second Lieut. Robert T. Lawney, Capt. George W. Reed, First Lieut. Alexander Britton, Second Lieut. T. H. Burke.

Gen. Corcoran's Brigade.

Recruits for the various regiments connected with this brigade are coming in thick and fast. During the whole of Wednesday the recruiting stations were crowded, and the recruiting officers were busy in making out the papers preparatory to the men being examined and mustered into the service of the United States. It is requested that all persons who wish to hold personal communication with the General—excepting commanding officers, and officers connected with the brigade—will call on him between the hours of 10 and 12 A. M. Dr. DWYER has been officially notified that he has been nominated regimental surgeon of the Sixty-ninth. Wednesday, the following letter was received from Secretary CHASE, in answer to a communication from Gen. CORCORAN:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Sept. 8, 1862.

GEN. CORCORAN: It gives me pleasure to say that there will be no delay in the payment of your gallant Sixty-ninth so far as this Department is concerned. In accordance with a request received to-day from the War Department, a requisition will be made out, of which the funds necessary for the purpose will be taken at once, as I understand.

Success to you and to the Sixty-ninth, and above all, salvation to our country. Yours truly,

S. P. CHASE.

Brig.-Gen. MICHAEL CORCORAN.

The following is a correct list of the regiments officially attached to General CORCORAN's Brigade; others have been informally attached, but have not yet received official notification of the same:

First Regiment—The Sixty-Ninth, the old Sixty-Ninth, which has just now returned from its second campaign on the Potomac.

Second Regiment—The Fourth Senatorial District Regiment, commanded by Col. PETER MCDERMOTT, who served with distinction in Mexico; Lieut.-Col. JAMES P. MCIVOR, late of the Sixty-Ninth, and a prisoner of war for thirteen months in rebel dungeons.

Third Regiment—The Buffalo Regiment, commanded by Col. JOHN E. MCMAHON, now numbering over 800 men.

Fourth Regiment—The "Albany Regiment," late commanded by Col. BRYAN, of the Twenty-fifth New-York State Militia, who has just returned with that corps from the seat of war.

Fifth Regiment—This regiment is to be commanded by Col. WM. MCEVILY, who is an old and experienced officer. Lieutenant-Colonel, JAMES MOONEY, United States Army. Although this regiment has been in operation only a few days, it numbers over 400 men.

Military Movements in the City.

GEN. MEAGHER'S IRISH BRIGADE.

All uniformed and ununiformed recruits of Gen. MEAGHER's Irish Brigade, now in this City, have been notified, by Special Order, to report at the head recruiting office, No. 398 BROADWAY, on this and to-morrow (Saturday) mornings, to receive State and City bounties, and be sent on to their brigade. By the way, it is important and should be known—for the sake of the wives and families, as well as of the poor recruits themselves—that the bounties given to Gen. MEAGHER's Brigade exceed by $50—the State allowance—those given to all other organizations, save the other old regiments being recruited for amongst us. No new organizations—and they are most numerous around us—can draw the State bounty. It is reserved and paid alone to those gallant State volunteers who fought throughout the past year, and who, with pride speak of what conflicts they have been through. To such standards as tell of our triumphs from Fair Oaks to Malvern Hill patriotic recruits should rally; and it is to the men who have perilled all in a dozen battles that our merchant-princes should give relief. The officers of Gen. MEAGHER's Brigade say, with pride, that they have never begged for assistance. That is right of them, but as the State, in giving them the additional fifty dollars, recognizes their pre-eminent claims, so ought the patriotic and wealthy merchants; and recruits themselves should recollect where the largest bounties are to be had. Col. NUGENT, who has been in charge of the recruiting since Gen. MEAGHER's departure, is daily in expectation of other recruiting officers from the brigade, when he will at once return to the command of his regiment.

SEVENTH NATIONAL GUARD BRIGADE.

There is much interest felt in having the Seventh Regiment announce its intention to form a Brigade of four or five thousand men, for not only our first merchants, but our leading insurance and banking houses, as well as those in authority in the City and State would most assuredly put forth their endeavors to make a Seventh National Guard Brigade the most complete and also the most formidable and best disciplined in the service. Several of the most prominent and popular Captains of the Seventh, so justly and meritoriously honored throughout the State, have already expressed their willingness and approbation of the scheme. Many would doubtless go in any capacity in which they might aid in maintaining the reputation of the regiment with which they have been so long and honorably connected. Mention has not only been made of the Field, but also of other officers—Captains YOUNG, CLARK, SPRAIGHT, Adjutant SMITH, Lieuts. PALMER, MCCLENAHAN, and others—these all most evidently have an interest in seeing the much prized banners of the National Guard carried to the front of the field, and from the readiness with which all have heretofore volunteered, and the promptitude with which they have responded when called upon to serve their country, it is saying none too much that the chances of such a brigade being speedily filled are the best of any. Let Col. LEFFERTS, with his rank and file, but come out in this new phase, sustaining the five hundred of this regiment now in the field as officers, and the State will more than acknowledge them.

SWORD PRESENTATION.

On Wednesday night a very handsome sword, sash and belt were presented to Lieut. GEO. WASHBURNE, of Company E, Second Regiment, Metropolitan Guards, by his fellow-policemen of the Twenty-seventh Precinct. The sword is a splendid specimen of a blade, is beautifully mounted, and bears the following inscription:

"To Lieut, GEORGE WASHBURNE, by his friends of the First Platoon of the Twenty-seventh Precinct Police, Sept. 10, 1862."

The presentation speech was made by Capt. MASON DE CAMP, whose eloquent remarks elicited the most enthusiastic applause from those present. Speeches were also made by Roundsman MILLS and others, after which the company sat down to a bountiful repast.

THE GROCERS AWAKE.

Several of the prominent grocery firms of this city, desirous of doing something as tradesmen, have issued the following call for a meeting to-day:

The grocers of this city are requested to meet at the Wall-street salesroom to-morrow (12th instant;) at 1½ o'clock P. M., for the purpose or organizing one or more companies of recruits for the war.

A WORD TO CHRISTIAN PATRIOTS.

Since the war commenced, the American Tract Society has expended nearly $40,000 in furnishing religious reading for the Army and Navy, a most blessed work in its known results. To meet the constant and most urgent appeals now made to the Committee for the new troops, and the thousands of sick and wounded in the hospitals, at least $30,000 is needed. Every dollar received for this purpose will be promptly expended in supplying these brave men with instructive, sustaining and comforting truth. Two hundred publications have been issued expressly for them by the Society. They need, deserve and will appreciate our effort. The Committee plead for immediate aid. Without it they cannot meet the hourly and earnest calls made upon them. May we not ask pastors of churches to make special collections for this object; and all who love their country and the souls of her soldiery to forward their benefactions, great or small, to O. R. KINGSBURY, Assistant Treasurer, No. 150 Nassau-street, New-York.

THE ENROLLMENT FOR THE DRAFT.

To facilitate the completion of enrolling the names of residents of this City, Judge Advocate General ANTHON has taken another floor in the building where his offices are situated, and has put on an extra force of fifty copying clerks, whose duty it is to register in district and ward books the names brought in by the enrolling officers. It is expected that the names of the entire able-bodied population will be obtained by the end of the week, and the Judge Advocate has so systematized the subsequent business of his office as to ensure its being got through with in as short a time as possible. The preliminary registration of names has been finished in Brooklyn, and Gen. ANTHON has published an address to the people of that City, requesting them to correct whatever errors, and supply whatever omissions any of them may be able to detect in the books, which it is presumed will be left open to their inspection. The total number of names enrolled in Brooklyn is over 40,000, though, at the present time, less than 3,000 men are wanted to fill up the entire quota for which Brooklyn is liable.

PROGRESS OF ENLISTMENTS—UNITED STATES MUSTERING OFFICE.

Recruiting was brisk, as usual, Wednesday, though the difficulty between the United States and State inspecting surgeons has produced a complicated and elaborate system of examination which delays proceedings considerably. Capt. LAENED, Lieut. KENASTON, and Dr. MOTT and his assistants, do their best, however, to expedite matters, notwithstanding the needless obstacles put in the way. In connection with the trouble between Dr. THOMSON, the State Doctor, and the United States mustering office, the following letter has been sent to the TIMES for publication:

NOTE FROM DR. THOMSON, STATE MEDICAL INSPECTOR.

To the Editor of the N. Y. Times:

I find in your journal of this morning a long statement of an "Official Imbroglio of Doctors," to which, I hope, you will allow me a brief answer. I was informed by the State authorities of my appointment to reinspect, on behalf of the State, such recruits as had passed the United States inspection for old regiments. The Surgeon-General, in his instructions to me, stated that great complaints had been made by commanding officers of the character of the New-York recruits who, in hundreds of cases, reinforced nothing but the hospitals, and I was expressly directed, therefore, not to examine recruits until they had passed the United States Inspector. I have accordingly done so from the first, and have thus inspected six thousand recruits, without any imbroglio, lock or objection, as far as I was aware, until yesterday afternoon, when I received an "Order" from Col. REEVES, United States Mustering Officer, that recruits should be examined by me before the United States Surgeons. As I had never heard of him before, and he gave me no explanation of his order, I addressed him a note, stating that "I was instructed by the Surgeon-General not to examine recruits until they had been passed by the United States Inspector, and that I would not do otherwise till differently instructed." Now, it appears to me, that if Col. REEVES wished a change to be made, he might, in courtesy at least, have notified me previously of his wish, and I would certainly have inclosed it to the Surgeon-General, but as it is I can no more pay attention to his orders than to those of the Emperor of Morocco. I regret that the person who furnishes you the statement, represents me as openly quarreling with the United States Surgeons. My personal relations with Dr. MOTT have uniformly been of a pleasant character. That in this case, I have issued a proclamation of any kind is great news to me, and as to my being hard to please with reference to recruits, I am perfectly willing to submit those cases which I have rejected, as unfit soldiers, to the judgment of any physicians of fair professional standing, anywhere in the world.

Yours, respectfully,
W. H. THOMSON, M. D.,
State Medical Inspector.

DIVISION ARMORY, Sept. 9.

PAYMENT OF BOUNTIES.

All the bounties—United States, State and city—are being paid to recruits as fast as the needful papers can be passed through the hands of the officials appointed to that special duty. Capt. CARR is prompt to hand over the $29 offered by the United States, and Comptroller HAWS is equally ready with his distribution of the $50 a man provided for by the Common Council appropriation. The State bounty is unavoidably delayed through the roundabout way in which the certificates of men entitled to it have to pass back and forth between this city and Albany, but it is sure to be paid some time or other. The payment of bounties has, like everything else here connected with recruiting, been interfered with by the useless waste of time incurred in sending men to be inspected by Dr. THOMSON after they have passed the United States doctors.

ANOTHER TRADE MOVEMENT.

A call has been issued for a meeting of grocers, to meet at the Trade Salesroom to-day. Some of the most influential firms in the trade take part in the movement.

SECOND REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M., EIGHTY-SECOND NEW-YORK VOLUNTEERS.

Ninety-five recruits for this veteran regiment left this City during August for the seat of war, and the muster-rolls show that forty-one men have been recruited during the past week. This looks like business, and must soon bring the twice recruited regiment up to its standard. Lieut. DEMPSEY spares no expense or trouble in collecting such recruits as will go to work in earnest for this, "the fighting regiment of SUMNER's Corps." The Produce Exchange and the Union Defence Committee have swelled the bounties of this regiment so that every recruit receives the snug sum of $150 before leaving the City. See advertisement.

Annual Celebration of the Caledonian Club.

AULD SCOTIA IN THE FIELD.

Wednesday was a grand gala day for athletic Scotchmen in this City. A large and very respectable assemblage congregated at Jones' Woods, and went through the peculiar order of exercises, so well understood by them, with the utmost success. There was, perhaps, a little disappointment felt by some, on account of the hour for the commencement of the exercises not being named; but still, those who came late were fully repaid by the grand display that was made. Chief MCCLELLAN was early on the field, with his Clan, and everything betokened a good day's play; and we are happy to say, visitors were more than gratified.

At the sound of the bagpipe, the programme was commenced by the "Pulting of the Heavy Stone," by Mr. WM. LYONS, a stout-built, well-made man, who accomplished the feat with much ease.

The Hammer was dexterously thrown by Mr. GEO. GRASSOCK, who took the prize.

Then came the Running Jump, the Standing Jump, the Broad-sword Dance, the Short Race, Vaulting with the Pole, etc., etc., each of which were performed with comparative skill, but elicited no especial commendation. In fact, the whole day's play was far short of what it usually is, and much feeling was expressed in consequence. The officers of the Club desire it to be borne in mind, however, that a great many of its most active members are off to the war with the Seventy-ninth.

At the long race, twice around the course, ANDREW FORMAN was the successful competitor; doing the 206 yards in 55 seconds.

The Highland Fling was next; and right merrily did the bonnie lads trip it, for supremacy. Among them were Prof. J. A. MCPHERSON, M. T. ROBERTSON, PETER BOWMAN, and JOHN TAYLOR—a typo. The last named was given the first prize, the Professor the second, and BOWMAN the third. In this trial-dance there was a great deal of terpsichorean ability displayed.

In "Tossing the Caber,"—a stick of wood about twelve feet long, and six inches in diameter; there was great strife. JAMES STUART, GEORGE GRASSOCK, and JAMES CUMMINGS threw it over. JAMES LAW lamentably failed. STUART was first, but being the champion, only received a medal. GRASSOCK, who was second, received the prize.

The "Sack Race" gave the large company present great sport. The contending parties were JAMES LAW, DAVID MELVILLE, HUGH POLLOCK, and several others, who seemed not to have any idea how to take the sack. For instance, LAW got the sack and got into it; he then jumped, but fell, the rest getting far in the van. Summoning all courage, he again secured his equilibrium, and by the funniest and grotesque antics, passed all hands, and achieved a signal victory.

The "Standing Jump" was exceedingly well contested. GEO. GOLDEY, who is a very clever and graceful gymnast, was the favorite at the start, but broke down at 4 feet 4 inches.

FORMAN proved himself a splendid jumper. NICHOL was too short in the legs. JOHN CROWN, a lithe-built, wiry young fellow, took the palm in ease and spring, and therefore won the first prize. WALKER, who tried hard, and notwithstanding a bad fall, showed pluck and capability, took the second with the plaudits of the assemblage. The greatest height jumped was four feet five inches. JOHN CROWN, THOMAS NICHOL and ADAM WALKER were the only ones to contend for the running leap. CROWN won handsomely at four feet nine inches.

In the Hurdle Race WALKER took the lead, and with his long strides managed to keep up the pace with such a force that his long legs carried him through gallantly, and he took the first prize without a question to gainsay it. The tumbling and break-neck manner in which the contending parties went over the hurdles on this occasion was laughable in the extreme. FORMAN was the second in this race.

The "Hop, Skip and Jump" was easily won by JOHN NICHOL, at 36 feet 2 inches; GEO. GOLDEY was second at 33 feet 10 inches; JOHN GOLDEY third at 32 feet 2 inches.

The finale was the Wheelbarrow Race, and if anything, afforded more amusement than any previous performance. The parties were blindfolded, and each taking a barrow, turned it once, and then started for a given point. Some brought up in the same spot where they started; others went to the side of the field, and the rest hither and thither. The party who seemed to see as well in the dark as in the light was JOHN GOLDEY, but to outsiders CHAS. SANDERSON was the best man, but yet he did not win.

As a general thing there was not as good play as is usual. From late advices it will be seen that at the games of Breamar, Scotland, 43 feet were jumped in "hop, skip and jump;" and the light hammer was thrown 97 feet by WM. TAIT.

The reception of guests was very acceptably and gracefully performed by Messrs. BARKLEY, STRANGEWAYS and RAE; and what with the efforts of the Judges, headed by Mr. J. G. INNES, the Caledonian Club have great reason to feel themselves exceedingly flattered by the attendance, and honored by the success of their "gathering on the heath."

Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction.

Meeting of Fruit Growers.

INTERESTING DISCUSSION.

Yesterday afternoon the fruit growers held a second meeting at the office of the Agriculturist, in Park-row.

In the absence of the President, Mr. PARSONS, Mr. W. S. CARPENTER was called to the Chair.

There were present Messrs. W. S. CARPENTER, Dr. TRIMBALL, A. S. FULLER, LOWELL MASON, Jr., PRINCE O. B. JUDD, and other well-known horticulturists. Some two hundred plates of superb fruit were presented for examination, discussion and incorporation. Pears, peaches, grapes and plums were the principal fruits discussed, and the information imparted by the speakers was both instructive and entertaining.

Dr. TRIMBALL, whose fame as an insect fancier is becoming national, presented a sample of the apple insect which heretofore has done such damage to the crop, and on which a most valuable and entertaining address was made.

The Society resolved to adopt the title of the "Union Horticultural Society," as being comprehensive and explanatory to a sufficient degree.

After discussion came the proof—and the proof was most excellent, and found favor in the mouths not only of experts but experimenters.

A CARD.

The American Tract Society, through its officers, has issued the following address to Christian patriots, and to that large body of our regular readers we commend it:

Since the war commenced the American Tract Society has expended nearly $40,000 in furnishing religious reading for the army and navy—a most blessed work in its known results.

To meet the constant and most urgent appeals now made to the Committee for the new troops, and the thousands of sick and wounded in the hospital, at least $30,000 is needed.

Every dollar received for this purpose will be promptly expended in supplying these brave men with instructive, sustaining and comforting truth. Two hundred publications have been issued expressly for them by the Society. They need, deserve and will appreciate our effort.

The Committee plead for immediate aid. Without it they cannot meet the hourly and earnest calls made upon them.

May we not ask pastors of churches to make special collections for this object, and all who love their country and the souls of her soldiery to forward their benefactions, great or small, to O. R. KINGSBURY, Assistant-Treasurer, No. 150 Nassau-street, New-York. By order of the Committees.

An Incident at Taylor's Saloon—Niggers Not Waited On.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

On Saturday last, two ladies and little child, accompanied by a neat, tidy mulatto girl, nurse of the child, entered TAYLOR's saloon, corner Broadway and Leonard-street, and, seating themselves at one of the tables, called for refreshments. A waiter sat the table, placing thereon three plates. One of the ladies politely told him that she desired a plate, which he refused to get, saying, "We don't wait on niggers here." The matter was laid before the person at the pay-desk, who responded that such was the rule of the establishment. Now, we would suggest to the proprietors of this "establishment"—in order to save lady patrons from such insolence at the hands of hirelings—to print and put up rules, such as, persons with children and nurses need not apply. We don't wait on niggers here. Insolence from servants must be expected.

I will now merely add a little item which produced quite a revolution in the "rules" of the establishment. As soon as the gentleman learned that the ladies were profitable patrons of the place, he added immediately that he was sorry for the "blunder," and that "certainly" the "colored lady" should have a "plate." GENERAL CITY NEWS.

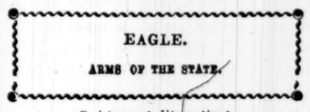
A NEW BAPTIST CHURCH.—The corner-stone of the new edifice for the Bloomingdale Baptist Church in Forty-second-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, was laid yesterday with appropriate ceremonies. The building will measure 98 feet 9 inches long by 61 feet wide, and will be two stories high. The basement will be 11½ feet high, and will be devoted to Sabbath-school and lecture-room purposes. The auditorum will be 35½ feet high, and will seat one thousand persons. The front will be of Dorchester stone, and the remainder of brick. HENRY VOLK & Co. are the masons, and D. GRINSTEAD does the carpenter work. In the box which was deposited in the corner-stone, was placed the box which has for nineteen years remained in a perfect state of preservation in the corner-stone of the Old Church, corner of Forty-third-street. To the old records were added the names of the present officers, as follows: Pastor—Rev. Isaac Westcott. Deacons—M. Stamels, A. Lathrop, J. Sparks, Wm. H. Dean. Trustees—F. B. Grist, President; Richard Mott, Secretary; S. T. Smith, Treasurer; J. B. Niblo, Jas M. Deitz, Jas. A. Allen, Jas. Scott, Jas. Van Buren Wm. Wilson. The church and lot will cost about $50,000, and be finished about May next. The foundations are laid, and the upper walls are in a fair state of progress. Among the clergymen present, and participating in the exercises, were Dr. Wescott, Dr. Dowling, Rev. Mr. Weston, Rev. Mr. Bucklin, Rev. Mr. Pendleton, and others. The platform was tastefully decorated with flags, and a large audience assembled to witness the interesting occasion.

A SPLENDID STAND OF COLORS FOR THE EIGHTEENTH CONNECTICUT VOLUNTEERS.—Some time ago the ladies of Norwich, Conn., created a fund to be expended in purchasing flags for the Eighteenth and Twenty-first Connecticut Volunteers. TIFFANY & Co., of this City, accordingly received the order to make the colors, which they did in the highest style of art. The regimental color is a magnificent banner of blue silk, margined with heavy gold fringe. It bears the following inscription:

EIGHTEENTH REGIMENT CONNECTICUT VOLUNTEERS.



Qui trans tulit sustinet.

The inscriptions, eagle and State arms, are most elaborately worked upon both sides of the flag. The staff is mounted with a silver spear and ornamented with two white and blue tassels. A silver plate upon the staff bears the inscription: "Presented by the ladies of Norwich, August, 1862." Two national guide colors complete the stand.

After the colors were completed they were forwarded to Norwich, the fair donors being anxious to see them before they were sent to the Regiment. It is needless to say that they met with the highest approval.

HAYTIAN EMIGRATION.—The bark Chanticleer sailed from this port, a day or two since, for Port de Paix, Hayti, with a find colony of sixty-five colored persons. The colony consists exclusively of agriculturists and their families—twenty-five adults and thirty-six children. They are all thrifty people, having sold, or rather sacrificed farms and other property in Illinois and Wisconsin, in order to establish themselves where their color will not prove a barrier to their industry and enterprise. Five of them, Mr. Woop and family, go as cabin passengers. These people carry with them all the means and appliances of an American farmer's life, and intend to take up land for the purpose of cotton-raising in the neighborhood of Port de Paix. Other colonies are preparing to start from the West.

A REUNION AMONG THE FIREMEN.—The member of Oceanus Engine Company No. 11, of this City, of which Coroner JOHN WILDEY is the Foreman, had a very pleasant reunion on Wednesday evening, at their rooms, No. 11 Wooster-street. This is the oldest fire company in the City, having been organized in 1780. The engine-house has recently been thoroughly renovated and refurnished throughout, mostly at the expense of the company, and the display made by the members on Wednesday evening was truly pleasant to all the numerous guests in attendance. Coroner WILDEY was Foreman of this company for five years previous to his joining the First Fire Zouaves, and since his return from the war he has been unanimously reelected to that office.

CHILDREN FOR THE WEST.—Yesterday afternoon the Children's Aid Society dispatched to the West, in search of homes and fortunes, a fine company of forty boys and girls. Mr. C. C. TRACY, who has already happily located several thousands of little folks in the far West, took charge of them, and in fine spirits, with songs and glee, the little ones bade farewell to the cold hearts of Gotham, looking forward with bright anticipation to their pleasant future in the golden land.

FIRE AT FISHKILL LANDING, HUDSON RIVER.—The family mansion and homestead of JOHN P. DE WINT, Esq., was destroyed by fire on Sunday afternoon, the 7th inst. This was one of the finest and oldest country seats in the State, having been occupied by the DE WINT family upwards of 100 years. Most of the family pictures and plate were saved, but little of the furniture, as the flames spread with great rapidity.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.—SARAH HILLYER, a girl, ten years of age, residing with her mother at No. 330 West Twenty-seventh-street, yesterday fell into the dock at the foot of Eighteenth-street, North River, and was drowned before assistance could be rendered ....Coroner NAUMANN yesterday held an Inquest upon the body of JAMES SMITH, who accidentally fell overboard from the ship West Point. The deceased was a sailor, aged 35 years.

ARREST OF A PICKPOCKET.—ISAAC SPINGLE was arrested yesterday by Officer PORCHER, of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, charged with having picked the pocket of JOE DAVIS, a resident of Green Point, of a gold watch and chain valued at $75. The property was subsequently recovered, and the offender was last night committed to the Tombs by Justice BRENNAN.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

DEPARTURE OF THE SECOND SENATORIAL REGIMENT FOR THE SEAT OF WAR.—This Regiment, designated as the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth, finally left Camp Arthur, near the Navy-yard, last evening, and after marching up Nassau to Bridge-street, up Myrtle-avenue to Pearl-street, and down Pearl to the river, embarked on the Union Ferry-boat Montague, by which they were conveyed to an ocean steamer at the foot of Canal-street. During the day the City Park, in which the regiment was encamped, presented a busy and exciting scene. Thousands of persons thronged the inclosure, many the wives and relatives of the soldiers, who came to bid them good bye. The men were provided with overcoats, knapsacks, canteens and three days' rations. Meantime the officers assembled at the headquarters, corner of Nassau-street and Hudson-avenue, and presented Col. CONK with an elegant sword, sash, belt and haversack. A brief address was made by Dr. THOMAS P. NORRIS, and an appropriate and patriotic response on behalf of the recipient, by S. D. MORRIS, Esq. During the day, a sword was also presented to Capt. THOMAS MULCAHY, of Company K.

The regiment embarked on the ferry-boat about 6 o'clock P. M., in good order, and steamed off amid the cheers of a vast multitude which had assembled to see them. They numbered nearly 900 men. The following is a corrected list of the officers:

THE LATE ACCIDENT AT CONEY ISLAND.—The body of Dr. R. A. EATON, who was drowned while bathing in the surf at Coney Island on Tuesday, was washed ashore about a mile in a westerly direction from where the accident occurred, and was recovered on Wednesday evening. The remains were taken to his late residence, No. 349 Carlton-avenue. An inquest was held by Coroner HIGGINS, and a verdict of accidental drowning was rendered by the jury.

THE THIRTEENTH REGIMENT MILITIA.—This regiment, under command of Col. ROBERT B. CLARK, will be mustered out of the United States service, at the City Armory, this morning, at 9 o'clock, and in the afternoon, at 4 o'clock, will be reviewed on Fort Greene by the Mayor and Common Council.

NEW-JERSEY.

THE MURDER AT SEACAUCUS.—The inquest on the body of JOHN EISELE, who was murdered at Seacaucus, N. J., on Tuesday morning last, was adjourned to-day, (Thursday,) until to-morrow afternoon. Three or four young men who were on a carousal at ENGELLERECHT's house with the supposed murderer, were subpœnaed to be present at the inquest, but from some cause failed to make their appearance. Coroner BOHNSTEDT issued a warrant for the arrest of the soldier, WASHINGTON MASTERS, against whom there is strong grounds for suspicion that he is the guilty party, and placed it in the hands of Chief of Police GILESON, of Hoboken, and Constable DAVIS. The officers at once proceeded to New-York, where it is supposed that MASTERS is lurking, and will use every effort for his arrest. MASTERS is about five feet eleven inches in heighth; rather slim built, dark complexion, dark hair, stoops slightly.

LAW REPORTS.

The Traphagan Habeas Corpus Case—The Boy not Produced.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Leonard.

In re Traphagan vs. Col. Gustavus Loomis.—In this case, mentioned in the TIMES of Thursday, in which Col. Loomis was arrested by the Sheriff for contempt in failing to make a return to a writ of habeas corpus, issued to him, to produce the body of Richard P. Traphagan, a recruit, alleged to be an infant, the Court allowed Col. Loomis to obtain bail on his stipulation to send to Washington for the boy, whither he had been sent with his regiment, and adjourned the hearing on the attachment to Thursday.

Yesterday, Col. Loomis appeared in Court in accordance to his stipulation, and stated that the messenger dispatched to Washington by him had not returned, nor had the boy been replaced in his custody or under his control. Under these circumstances, and desirous of avoiding incarceration as a penalty for disobedience, Col. Loomis, through his counsel, asked further time in which, if granted, he had no doubt of his ability to regain possession of the boy, whom he allowed to be sent away against the command of this writ of habeas corpus. The counsel for the petitioner consenting that the hearing be further adjourned, the Court set it down as adjourned for one week, the case then to be closed. In the meantime Col. Loomis is in the custody of the Sheriff.

A. H. Reavey, for petitioner; E. C. Childs, for Col. Loomis.

Irregularity of Judgment No Defense to a Disobedience of an Order of the Court.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Barnard.

Washburne vs. Langley.—In this case, before mentioned in the TIMES, the defendant was advised by his counsel that the judgment obtained against him was irregular, and that the proper mode to raise the question as to the regularity of the judgment, was by disobeying the order obtained by the plaintiff, directing him to appear and be examined as to his property. The Court held that he should have appeared and have obtained an adjournment till he could make a motion to set aside the judgment.

Defendant alleges that a motion to set aside the judgment had been noticed for July 7, 1862.

The facts constituting the contempt are all admitted, and the papers do not show any sufficient excuse.

I think the proper order to be made is adjudging defendant guilty of contempt, and directing that if the defendant, on the third Monday of September, 1862, at 10 o'clock A. M., appear at the Chambers of this Court, and either submit to his examination and pay $10 costs of this motion, or shall, on that day, on affidavits, (copies of which shall have been served six days previous on plaintiff's attorney,) procure a dismissal of the supplementary proceedings by reason of the judgment having been so far vacated as not to allow of supplementary proceedings being had thereon, and pay to plaintiff's attorney $10 costs of this motion, then he shall stand purged of his contempt; but

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

There is no doubt that the rebels occupied Hagerstown, Maryland, in force, yesterday evening. They are estimated at twenty thousand strong, with forty-eight pieces of artillery. Since then their movements are unreported, as the telegraph operator left that locality. The exact whereabouts of our forces is not known, but it is announced that Gen. MCCLELLAN had on Wednesday advanced as far as Damascus, thirty-four miles from Washington. Gen. BURNSIDE is supposed to be operating in some other direction.

A dispatch, dated near Poolesville, Md., Sept. 10, says: "Our pickets to-day occupied Sugar Loaf Mountain. Yesterday the rebels held it, but evacuated it without firing a gun. Sugar Loaf Mountain is an important position, located nine miles south of Frederick, and eight miles north of Poolesville, from which the enemy were driven by the cavalry dash on Monday. This movement indicates that Gen. MCCLELLAN is marching directly upon the main position occupied by the rebels. The mountain is 1,300 feet high, and is one of a series lying on the east bank of the Monocacy. It was held by the rebels as a signal station while Poolesville was in their occupation, and from it, with a good telescope, a very clear view of Washington could be obtained. No movement of the army could be made around Washington without being known to an enemy perched upon this mountain.

The rebel General LEE has issued a proclamation to the people of Maryland, dated the 8th inst., in which he announces that the purpose of the rebel army is to liberate the State from the National rule. He is good enough, however, to assure the people that they can have their choice in the matter. He says: "It is for you to decide your destiny, freely and without restraint. This army will respect your choice, whatever it may be; and while the Southern people will rejoice to welcome you to your natural position among them, they will only welcome you when you come of your own free will."

The greatest excitement existed in the early part of this week throughout York and Adams County, Pennsylvania, as well as at Harrisburgh and throughout the Susquehanna region and the Cleveland Valley. The farmers were sending their women and children, as well as their cattle, away, and were arming for the defence of their homes against cavalry raids.

At Wilkesbarre, on Tuesday, all places of business were closed. All the church bells and courthouse bells rang for the people to assemble for drill, at which time nearly all the able-bodied men in the town, amounting to some hundreds, assembled in the public square, formed into companies, marched to the river bank, and drilled. Men over sixty years of age fell into the ranks and drilled.

We learn by way of Fortress Monroe that the rebels, twelve hundred strong, made an attack on Washington, N. C., on the morning of the 6th inst., and were repulsed and pursued seven miles. Our force engaged numbered only four hundred, and the battle lasted two hours. The First Regiment of North Carolina Union Volunteers was engaged, and is said to have behaved with the greatest bravery. A large number of the rebels were killed and wounded; our loss was seven killed and forty-seven wounded. The gunboat Louisiana rendered essential service in shelling the rebels out of a strong position. The gunboat Picket was blown up by the accidental explosion of her magazine, and Capt. NICHOLS and nineteen men were killed, and six wounded.

Fifteen hundred rebel cavalry hold possession of Frankfort, the capital of Kentucky. KIRBY SMITH has issued a proclamation, informing the citizens that they must fight for him or against him. The rebels have organized the city government, and appointed a Mayor.

The advices from Cincinnati are important and exciting. The rebels are said to have driven in the National pickets beyond Covington yesterday morning, and were reported to be in force only two miles from our lines, gradually feeling their way. A dispatch from Cincinnati, dated at 2 o'clock P. M., yesterday, reports the rebels at Lotonia Springs, about seven miles from Covington, and it was generally expected that a fight would immediately take place. The National forces were said to be large, and no apprehension was felt as to the result of the conflict.

Instead of moving forward upon Knoxville, Gen. BUELL is really passing up in the direction of Nashville. The army seems to have been moving in two or three columns parallel with the railroad connecting Nashville and Stevenson. Its progress is very slow indeed. Gen. BUELL is evidently watching to see what effect his retirement will have upon BRAGG at Chattanooga; for BRAGG is still at Chattanooga in force, or else has greatly deceived BUELL. We take it that ten days ago the Army of the Ohio was disposed along the branch railroad from Tullahoma to McMinnville, and we must confess that BUELL'S attitude looks more defensive than offensive. So, indeed, has it appeared since the 1st of July, when Gen. B.'s army arrived at Huntsville.

Advices from Salt Lake City, by telegraph, to the 10th inst., state that two trains had been attacked by the Indians about three hundred miles north of that place, and that fifteen or twenty persons had been killed, including women and children. Other outrages by the savages are mentioned.

GENERAL NEWS.

The second day's session of the Democratic State Convention resulted in the nomination of all the candidates for State officers. The ticket stands as follows:

For Governor—Hon. HORATIO SEYMOUR.
For Lieut.-Governor—Hon. DAVID R. FLOYD JONES.
For Canal Commissioner—WM. J. SKINNER.
For State Prison Inspector—GAYLORD J. CLARK.
For Clerk of the Court of Appeals—FREDERICK A. TALLMADGE.

A State Central Committee was also appointed, and a platform was adopted, which will be found in our report of the proceedings.

The National Intelligencer mentions the following troops as having arrived in Washington: The Thirty-seventh Massachusetts, 980 men, Lieut.-Col. A. E. GOODRICH commanding; the One Hundred and Seventeenth and One Hundred and Thirtieth New-York—the former numbering 1,000 men, and the latter, commanded by Lieut.-Col. F. J. THORP, numbering 980 men. The Fortieth Massachusetts came in late Wednesday evening, numbering near 1,000. Numbers of detached companies of cavalry, artillery and recruits also came in during Wednesday.

The citizens of the Ninth Ward assembled in the Bleecker Building, last evening, to organize a Home Guard. Dr. BURCHARD delivered a stirring address, resolutions were passed, an Executive Committee of nine appointed, and enrollment lists opened on which 75 names were at once inscribed. The first rendezvous for drill will be at the Washington Parade Grouud, at 7 o'clock on Monday evening next.

Lively apprehensions are entertained that Fort Abercrombie, Minn., will fall into the hands of the Indians, if such a disaster has not already occurred. It is a fort only in name, and will not sustain an attack like that made on Fort Ridgeley. There were, at last accounts, some thirty or forty women, and thirty-five children, huddled in the garret of a small building occupied by the commanding officer. Every other building was filled with the soldiers and the people seeking refuge there who had fled from their homes. There is no water to be had nearer than the river, which is about six hundred feet from the officers' quarters. In case of an attack by a swarm of Indians, it would be almost certain death to venture outside of the buildings.

There are signs of Indian troubles in Northern Michigan as well as Minnesota. Indian warriors are gathering in the vicinity of Bay City, who exhibit signs of hostile intentions. There are said to be 2,000 well-armed warriors among the Indians in Northern Michigan, who are capable of doing much mischief, though they could be soon exterminated.

The Engineers of the Troy and Boston Railroad have, of late, been greatly embarrassed by obstructions on the track. Saturday last, a woman who had long been suspected as the guilty one, was seen, after the train had been stopped, and the obstruction removed, in such a position as to justify her arrest. She was taken to Troy and placed in jail. She has already almost confessed she was the guilty one, but refuses to give her name, or accept of any food.

Gen. GARFIELD, known as the "praying Colonel," is a nominee for Congress in Ohio. Col. GARFIELD, when the war broke out, was President of Hiram College in Ohio, and graduated from that as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Forty-second Ohio Regiment. He has since been made successively a Colonel and Brigadier-General, for bravery and ability displayed on the field.

Col. GRAHAM N. FITCH, formerly United States Senator, and latterly commanding with distinction a National force in Northeastern Arkansas, has gone to his home in Indiana. He has been disabled by the fall of his horse, and rendered thereby unfit for the fatiguing and more active operations of the army. He has tendered his resignation to the Secretary of War.

The venerable minister of the Gospel and Revolutionary patriot, Father WALDO, was one hundred years old on Wednesday of this week. He lives in Syracuse, and his birthday was commemorated by appropriate public exercises.

So frequent have been the desertions from the British army in the Provinces to the American side, that the Commander-in-Chief of H. M. Land Forces in British North America purposes in future that all deserters caught in the act shall be shot, instead of being transported to a penal colony.

Major W. T. C. GROWER, of the 77th New-York, who, in the first list of killed and wounded in the battle of Saturday, the 30th, was reported as killed, and who, in the official list, was not mentioned among either killed or wounded, was really wounded in four different places on that occasion, and now lies in the hospital at Alexandria.

The Stock Market was again firm yesterday. The bidding in the afternoon was strong, at an improvement on the prices of Wednesday for most of the Railway Stocks. Gold was steady, at 118¾@119; Exchange, 130½@130¾ ₱ cent.

A moderate business was transacted in Flour, yesterday, at very firm prices. Grain was less sought after, including Wheat, which declined 1c.@2c. ₱ bushel, and Corn, which was heavy. Cotton was quiet and less buoyant. The movements in Groceries, Provisions, Oils and Naval Stores were restricted. Whisky was in fair demand, and was rather dearer. Hay, Tallow and Tobacco were salable and buoyant. Moderate Freight engagements were reported.

THE REBEL ADVANCE ON CINCINNATI.—The rebel army which has advanced so boldly from Tennessee and across the entire State of Kentucky, is still menacing Cincinnati, which seems to be enjoying a renewal of the panic it had ten days ago. All the arms-bearing citizens of Cincinnati are mustered into service, and nearly the whole fighting population of the State of Ohio seems to have rushed to the relief of the State's chief city. There cannot certainly be less than seventy-five thousand men now in the immediate vicinity of Cincinnati, ready for its defence. Nevertheless, the rebels are pushing up to it boldly, and the telegraph this morning announces that they are only about two miles from our lines, and that yesterday they drove in our pickets. Beside the troops in front of the invading rebel army, the loyal Kentuckians on its flank and in its rear are rushing to arms; and if any less than twenty-five thousand Kentucky Unionists have shouldered their rifles since their State was entered by the invaders, there must be tremendous exaggerations in the statements made and published in Kentucky. In addition to these raw troops which have been hastily got together for the occasion, Gen. BUELL has an army far in the rear of the invaders, which, a fortnight ago, was sixty, and is now nearly ninety thousand strong; and Gen. GRANT has enough men in Memphis to make a round hundred thousand upon this line. Take it all in all, in front and rear, and there are certainly not less than two hundred thousand Union soldiers in position, to-day, to advance upon the rebels who have so audaciously marched into the bowels of Kentucky without impediment. How big the invading rebel force may be we have no means of precisely knowing, but we do not believe that KIRBY SMITH, HUMPHEY MARSHALL, and all the other rebel commanders between the Cumberland Mountains and the Ohio River could muster fifty thousand men. This force is mostly the fragments of BEAUREGARD'S old army at Corinth, which, according to his own intercepted dispatch, was but 35,000 strong, and which melted away like mist, added to some recent victims of the rebel conscription, and the recruits who have been obtained in Kentucky.

We hope our gallant Western army will get ready by-and-bye to actually attack these rebels; and that they will not be allowed to "gradually feel" their way much nearer to Cincinnati. Every day they are allowed to remain in and hold possession of Kentucky, and menace Cincinnati or Louisville, is a day of disgrace to our arms, and an infinite loss to our cause.

The Ragged Raid of Lee.

The hatless, shoeless, coatless army of the rebel Gen. LEE, about whose movements and intentions so much vague speculation has for a week past exercised the calm observers of passing events in Washington, are at last beginning to exhibit their presence and their purposes with a plainness which ought to open the eyes even of the most self-satisfied military critic in that abode of strong delusions. This "rabble rout," whose passage of the Potomac we were gravely notified by telegraph, was regarded with satisfaction in "well-informed circles," has so far established itself in the very heart of Maryland that its leader—the commanding General, be it noted, of the whole Confederate army—has thought the time ripe for issuing his proclamation to the people of that State. That any man in his senses should read this proclamation and fail to appreciate the extent of the peril with which the Republic is now threatened, would surprise us, had not the faculty of astonishment been well nigh exhausted by the events of the last eighteen months.

The theory of State rights, of Sovereign State independence, stands armed to-day on the soil of Maryland, within striking distance of the National Capital, to denounce the Government of the Union as a "foreign despotism, and invites the citizens of Maryland to join with it in the spirit and in the flesh. Secession is no longer upon the defensive. It no longer plants itself upon the frontiers of its birthplace to repel the authority of the National name. It no longer asks "to be let alone." It has assumed the offensive. It undertakes to propagate itself by the sword. While we are asking ourselves what these half-starved hordes would be at, and laying to our souls the flattering unction that despair alone has lured this famished multitude from the mountains of Virginia to feed fat their grudge and their hunger alike upon the fertile soil of Maryland and Pennsylvania, the soldiers of DAVIS and of LEE are pressing forward into a war of unmistakable invasion and an audacious attempt at conquest. While we are hurrying forward our brave but undisciplined levies by the thousand to the slaughter, these bands at which we have sneered so lightly in the conscious superiority of our numbers and our wealth, are slipping by our most skillful commanders, turning our lines, and threatening the homes of the North, with a concentration of passion and a distinctness of aim which throw into terrible relief the hazy and wavering outlines of our own hesitating and uncertain policy.

It is not worth while now to discuss how far the mistakes of the National Government have given a tinge of plausibility and a flavor of force to the rebel General's lofty recitation of the wrongs inflicted upon "downtrodden" Maryland, nor how far by ignoring the predominant Union feeling of the State, and artfully exaggerating the register of traitors suppressed and silenced, he has been enabled to paint a presentable picture of oppression, inviting sympathy. It is not even worth while to expose to the scorn of mankind the insolent presumption with which this officer of a Government which counts the victims of its domestic tyranny not by scores, but by hundreds, this citizen of a Confederacy in which law has been swallowed up by the passion of the mob, dares to present himself before the world as the liberator of a gagged and fettered people. The most dishonest representations, the most shameless claims, are too often sanctified in this world by success, and the question of the hour in Maryland is simply the immediate expulsion of the rebel General who can venture to issue in the Capital of that State such an appeal against the Government of the Union as this:

"Believing that the people of Maryland possess a spirit too lofty to submit to such a Government, the people of the South have long wished to aid you in throwing off this foreign yoke, to enable you again to enjoy the inalienable rights of freemen, and restore the independence and sovereignty of your State.

In obedience to this wish, our army has come among you, and is prepared to assist you with the power of its arms, in regaining the rights of which you have been so unjustly despoiled."

Imagine this language, held by ROBERT LEE, at the head of a hundred thousand victorious troops, not in the little City of Frederick, but in the great City of Baltimore, and who shall venture to forecast the next step of the audacious foray? Yet how long is it since the man who should have ventured to prophecy that language such as this would be uttered to-day by ROBERT LEE in Frederick, would have been scoffed at as a dreamer and a fool? Let us not be deceived. The manifesto of LEE makes the scope and the extent of this new danger clear, peremptory and positive. To let this mischief gather head for a week, a day, an hour, is to expose the Union to the gravest risks with which it has yet been menaced in the course of this rebellion. It is the open challenge of our foes to that battle of life or death which is drawing in upon us now in terrible earnest.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.—Our readers will find, on another page, a very interesting communication from our correspondent at Chicago, comprising the most important portion of the proceedings of the Pacific Railroad Commissioners recently convened in that city, under the act of Congress.

We refer, in particular, to the patriotic and comprehensive resolutions of the body, which present to the country, in condensed form and logical sequence, all the prominent features of the public considerations involved in the work, and especially its vital influence to the continental unity of the Republic. The interesting and instructive speeches in support of the resolutions, from members of the body, representing the different quarters of the nation yet remaining loyal, though reported only in brief outline, nevertheless present facts and views of cardinal national importance. We trust that their authors will give them more fully to the public, which will learn with surprise the comparative ease of executing a work heretofore deemed so formidable. The attractive pictures presented by Governor EVANS, of Colorado, and others, of the gold-bearing regions of the Rocky Mountains, and of the silver-bearing slopes of the Sierra Nevada,—graphically denominated in debate, "the gold and silver stepping-stones of our great, Continental highway,"—will not lessen the determination of the country to make sure of perpetual political union between its two great Ocean coasts, and the exhaustless treasures of our great metalliferous interior.

We venture to predict, that when the facts come to be fully known, the universal cry will go up from our whole land, "Let the road be made at once, that a Continent so rich in dormant treasure may be ours forever."

The Impending Contest.

The public awaits, with breathless interest, the progress of the rebel invasion of the loyal States. It is universally felt, that, if it be met with the vigor and ability which the crisis demands, the rebels will have been betrayed by their rashness to their destruction. They have advanced far from their base of operations, and by a long line, which exposes their flank to the enemy, and renders a defeat, properly followed up, equivalent to their destruction. The first impulse of every one is to predict their utter annihilation; and this would be the general feeling of the public, but for the frequent and terrible trials to which its faith has been subjected during the past year. Our people have made up their minds to indulge more moderate expectations in regard to military movements, hereafter, and not to exult in victory before the battle has actually been fought.

One thing is very clear. If the rebel army is permitted to establish itself upon the soil of Maryland, or if our forces fail to attack and drive them out with prompt and decisive vigor, no amount of excuses or explanations will absolve the Government from the responsibility which will rest upon it. It is sufficiently disgraceful to our arms that they should have been permitted to enter Maryland at all. That they will be allowed to stay there,—to take up strong positions and hold our armies on the defensive, can only happen through an incapacity of generalship scarcely less culpable than downright treason. We have very little accurate or reliable information as to the movement of our armies, and know not, therefore, whether they are pushing forward to force the rebels to an engagement at the earliest moment possible, or whether they are permitting them to bring over all their forces before they are compelled to fight. The absence of all information upon the subject tends to increase the apprehensions of the public, for it indicates that very delay on the part of our Government from which the worst results are feared.

Gen. MCCLELLAN, after most marvelous alternations of fortune, has now reached what must prove the decisive test of his reputation. If he promptly overtakes and destroys this invading army, all question of the past will be forgotten, and he will be hailed by the unanimous voice of the people as the saviour of the nation. If he should lose the battle, or by long delays and circuitous strategy fail to bring the foe to action, or suffer him to slip out of his hands, even the vigorous and devoted faction which has given him the same zealous support under all circumstances, and without the slightest regard to the merit or the consequences of his acts, will find it very difficult to enlist public sentiment on his behalf. He has every motive which can stimulate a military commander to the utmost exercise of his faculties. He has a splendid opportunity, a magnificent army trained by himself, and said to be most enthusiastic in its devotion to him, and the longing sympathy of twenty millions of loyal men whose fate may depend on his success or failure.

Sanitary Education for the Camp.

There is something imperatively required in the thousands of new officers that are now being ushered into service beside a familiarity with HARDEE, and an ability to pass the examining board. We are not sure that common sense and social respectability should carry more weight in the selection of officers than a knowledge of tactics, but we are sure that an officer who is to be intrusted with the lives of one hundred men, or of one thousand, should know enough to preserve their health in camp as well as to save them upon the field.

Every officer aspiring to command should pass through a rudimentary medical education, sufficient to allow him to guard his men against the evils that inevitably fall upon all assemblages where the sanitary laws are violated. This education can be, in most cases, attained through the surgeon of the regiment, but it should be the duty of the Government to appoint a corps of medical instruction, especially to teach officers and men what is necessary to preserve them from disease and death. To make this corps of instruction effective, certain privileges should be granted them, and regimental surgeons, that would tend to the physical education of recruits. It is as impossible to take a man into camp and make him physically a soldier in a day, as it is to make him mentally so. The surgeon should have power to grant exemptions from duty, or from the duration of certain duties, until he is satisfied the recruit is capable of performing them without consigning himself to the hospital. To take a man from the desk, the loom, or any sedentary occupation, and attempt at once to make him perform the heavy duty of an artillery or cavalry soldier, is simple madness. Is it not imperative that each officer should know these simple facts, and the wonderful importance of keeping his men clean? Should he not know that his new-made soldiers ought not to be over-worked and under-fed, unless such a course is imperatively demanded. An instance occurs to our mind, of last year, where the Colonel of one of our New-York regiments, since made a Brigadier-General, drilled his men in the double-quick at mid-day under a broiling sun, until thirty of them dropped in the ranks, and the next day the hospitals were cumbered with over a hundred. Could a worse beginning be made to give a man a taste for his soldierly duties?

The proper mode of enlisting men for different branches of the service is that adopted in the French army, where a man's strength is tested by the dynamometer, and as it is developed, he is placed in that arm requiring his degree of force, making the engineers the highest grade, and the infantry the lowest. This method is not possible under our present mode of enlistments, but a moment's consideration will show its value. To make it understood, a table giving the lifting power, with both hands, from the age of eighteen to sixty, will be necessary:

18 years	178 lbs.	20 years	204 lbs.
19 "	184 "	40 "	200 "
20 "	190 "	50 "	167 "
21 "	195 "	60 "	127 "
25 "	202 "

This method shows at a glance that men are in their best strength between 30 and 40, while at the same time we know that our recruiting successes are principally among those from 20 to 30. These are simple facts, that should teach something of the necessity for common sense and sanitary education. It is not alone that we should raise men, but that we should know how afterward to care for them; and this end, under our system, can never be attained but by the education of officers.

Important Case Under the Prize Law.

An interesting matter, in connection with the case of the prize bark Hiawatha, will probably be brought before the United States Circuit Court, arising out of the mysterious disappearance of a portion of her cargo while she was in process of condemnation.

Our readers will recollect that when the fact of that disappearance was brought before Judge NELSON, he directed an inquiry to be made into the facts before a referee, and that the evidence be reported to him. This was done. Witnesses were examined connected with the Marshal's and District-Attorney's offices, men from the public stores where the cargo was stored on its discharge, the shipkeeper, and others. Among them was one Mr. POTTS, who was owner of part of the vessel. The examination showed a good many singular things occurring in relation to the case which might require explanation. But the main fact shown was, that this Mr. POTTS applied to the Marshal for leave to take a portion of the cargo, which he represented to be on deck, and being injured by the delay.

He proposed to remove the cargo to MILLER'S stores, Brooklyn, get a storage receipt for it in the name of the Marshal, and give it to the Marshal, together with a policy of insurance on it for its value. On these terms the Marshal gave POTTS an order for the cargo. This order, however, did not specify the number of packages to be delivered to him. Under it he took from the vessel a quantity of the cargo—to what amount was not made very clear, as he said he kept no memorandum, and no one was present on the part of the Marshal to see what he took—but probably all, or nearly all, the deficiency, which is estimated to be worth about fifty thousand dollars. Instead, however, of storing it, he had it put on a lighter, carried it to another ship, and shipped it for Liverpool. What became of it there was rather doubtful, but Mr. POTTS said he did it all without the knowledge of the owners of the ship or the cargo. The cargo was taken away Dec. 30, 1861, but nothing was known about the deficiency, or how it had arisen, until the matter came to be investigated by the Prize Commissioners on the discharge of the cargo, when no such place as MILLER'S stores could be found, and the property having gone to Liverpool, of course was not forthcoming. Upon examining this testimony, Judge NELSON made an order directing the Marshal to pay into Court the value of the property so delivered to Mr. POTTS, or show cause before the Court at its ensuing term. This order was made on the 16th of July last.

On the 17th of July, the last day of the session, Congress passed a joint resolution in relation to the law of prize, directing "that hereafter all moneys arising from the sale of property under the prize laws of the United States, whether under interlocutory or final decree, shall be paid by the Marshal into the Treasury of the United States for safe keeping, immediately after the day of sale, instead of the registry of the Court, less the costs and disbursements sworn to by the Marshal and taxed by the Court."

It becomes an interesting question what effect this resolution of Congress has upon the order of the Court to the Marshal of which we have spoken. If the resolution is intended to apply only to sales which took place after its passage, then it will be no protection to the Marshal when the Court calls on him to show cause. But it may well be that the Marshal may say to the Court that he is to account to the Treasury Department, and that the Court has nothing to do with the matter. It may be a question, however, whether the Court may not have power in all such cases to compel the Marshal to pay such moneys into the Treasury, instead of leaving the matter entirely to be settled between the Marshal and the Treasury Department, which quite possibly might never know whether he had sold prize property, or when he should be expected to pay over the proceeds of sales. And again, it may be a question whether the Court may not in this case be able to carry its order into effect, because this property has never been sold, and its value can hardly be said to arise "from the sale of prize property," in the words of the resolution.

The whole matter gives us promise of some interesting proceedings when Judge NELSON'S order is returnable before Court, which is on the 23d inst.

THE FRENCH OFFICIAL ORGAN AND THE AMERICAN QUESTION.—The Paris Moniteur has been for some time past publishing a series of letters concerning military operations in the United States, written by a man evidently conversant with his subject. These letters, which have attracted a great deal of attention, have been reproduced by the majority of the French newspapers at Paris and in the provinces. Lately, however, a partiality for the North, which was at first perceptible in these comments, disappeared. The South gradually gained ground in the mind of the writer, and soon his correspondence clearly indicated a change of views and sentiments, which, owing to the official character of the paper in which they were inserted, affected more or less the other organs of the Press. In one of its latest issues, the Moniteur, as if it wanted to remove all doubts about its conversion, translated and indorsed an article in the London Times, in which that paper advises Mr. LINCOLN to give up the prosecution of the present war, and to make peace with the South. These various symptoms have been interpreted by the Secessionists and their friends as a tendency on the part of the French Government to favor their cause, and as preliminary to the recognition of the Southern Confederacy. It will require a few weeks to determine how nearly correct this impression may be.

State and National Jurisdiction.

We mentioned a few days since the fact of a habeas corpus being issued by Judge SMALLEY, in Vermont, in the case of a person charged with discouraging enlistments and arrested therefor. We see by the Cooperstown Republican, that a similar case has arisen in this State, Judge NELSON having also issued a habeas corpus in favor of a man named HERKIMER, who was arrested for aiding in removing his son and another beyond the reach of the draft, and for discouraging enlistments.

A cotemporary takes the Vermont case as a text for a fulmination against Secretary STANTON, whom it charges with having largely exceeded his powers in the matter. It thinks that if the man is not produced, the State of Vermont will undertake a forcible rescue of him from the Marshal's hands.

We do not anticipate either that the man will be produced or that the State of Vermont will undertake any such thing. Nor do we anticipate any such action on the part of this State, should the sheriff to whom Judge NELSON'S habeas corpus is directed, determine, as the Republican says he will, to disregard the writ. Any attempt to get up a conflict between the judiciary and the military power of the Government in behalf of this miserable band of traitors and skedaddlers among us, who have been discouraging the reinforcement of our army, will fail. The public sentiment of our people is on the side of the Government in this matter. They have been outraged with the comparative impunity which these scoundrels have enjoyed; they have called for more stringent measures to be taken against them, and when stringency is employed, they will be slow to put obstacles in the way of its exercise. The tone of feeling in Cooperstown may be judged of by the remark of the Republican, that "It is a matter of some surprise that the writ should have been issued. It will be matter of still more surprise if an attempt is made to enforce it by attachment." And as to Vermont, the Burlington Free Press, from which Mr. STANTON'S critic takes its account of the affair, gives no encouragement whatever to the prospect of the State's backing up the Judge in his controversy.

If, indeed, it were to be understood that the orders of the Secretary of War were made without the approval of the President; that he was assuming to suspend the writ of habeas corpus of his own power and without authority, the case would be different. But the people understand that these orders of the Secretary of War are "By Authority," like the orders of the Judge-Advocate, or any of the subordinate officers of Government; and the orders harmonize with the temper of the popular mind, while any attempt on the part of the judiciary to override their proper and just execution, will not be supported by public sentiment, if we read it rightly. The people realize that we are at war, and they conform themselves for the present to that state of affairs, and will tolerate many things, and demand many things, which in time of peace would not be endured for a moment.

WHAT THE CRY FOR EMANCIPATION MEANS.—It has already been stated by one of our regular correspondents at Hilton Head, in a letter which we published yesterday, that President LINCOLN has sent out orders to that Department to organize, drill and arm a body of 5,000 negroes, and to organize 50,000 more, ostensibly to be employed as laborers, but probably with a view to their use, sooner or later, as soldiers. In view of the previous action of the President on this subject, such an announcement will very naturally excite some surprise, and lead to inquiry as to its meaning. Without trying, at present, to satisfy curiosity on this point, we beg to direct attention to another which it seems to involve.

President LINCOLN has undoubtedly taken this step under pressure from the Abolitionists, and in the hope to retain their support and silence their clamorous assaults. Whether he is likely to accomplish this object or not may be inferred from the language held by their leading representative, WENDELL PHILLIPS. In an article in this week's Independent Mr. PHILLIPS announces that they demand "Leaders as well as a Policy," and proceeds to show that under such leaders as are now in power,—"with HALLECK and MCCLELLAN in the field, and BLAIR and SEWARD in the Cabinet," a proclamation of Emancipation, even, would not be worth the paper on which it might be written. Here is the demand of this class of men, as stated by Mr. PHILLIPS:

"If the President should proclaim Emancipation, and HALLECK, MCCLELLAN, and BUELL smother, under pretence of executing, the measure, it will be a failure. Let us provide beforehand against such a danger. Let it be understood now that our claim of the Government is, 'Satisfy yourselves fully that your Conciliation Policy has failed, and then we demand a proclamation of Freedom—War, on war principles'—to be conducted by such men as Sumner of Massachusetts, Stevens of Pennsylvania, and Wade of Ohio, and their friends in the Cabinet—and by Hunter, Sigel, and Fremont in the field.

The times are too serious to risk another mistake. Let thinking men solemnly impress it on the nation that, no matter how high in office, or how wide the rule reaches, no emancipation policy is of any value unless its earnest and downright friends are put at the head of affairs. Let us state now, that whenever President LINCOLN, according to his promise to Mr. GREELEY, adopts a new method, dictated by necessity, we demand, according to good sense and all national usage, that he put into the Cabinet men who have advocated that policy since the beginning of the war, and give the control of the army to soldiers whose hearts are in that plan—soldiers like Sigel, who have never met a reverse, and like Fremont, who, thwarted at every point, and robbed of both men and supplies, can still boast that, thus far, he is the only General before whom Stonewall JACKSON has retreated, though having two men to our one. This demand springs from no weak partiality for favorite men, but is an imperative necessity, a fair claim, a simple conformity with approved and judicious custom."

Mr. LINCOLN will perceive from this that he is expected not only to adopt a thorough and radical Abolition policy in his conduct of the war, but to put in power thorough, radical Abolitionists—the men who have been such from the beginning—to carry it into effect. Possibly, after everything else has been done which they may think necessary in this connection, they may ask him to resign on the same principle, and put Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS in his place. We should gain one point by this: Mr. PHILLIPS, if he should accept the office, would be obliged to take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States—which he never has done yet.

OFFICERING THE MILITIA.—GOV. OLDEN, of New-Jersey, in his address to the Line officers of the State Militia, has set an example which the other Governors would do well to imitate. They are about to select the Field officers of the regiments into which their companies are to be organized; and he addresses them in a sort of judicial charge, setting forth the high responsibility involved in the choice, pointing out that none but the purest and most patriotic motives should be allowed to influence them, and urging upon them the importance of selecting for their officers only the best and most competent men. Gov. OLDEN has done well to direct attention to this momentous matter, and the spirit of his counsel should be heeded wherever a regiment is being officered.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Arrival of Rebel Prisoners from Maryland.

Last Visit of the Ambulances to the Battle-Field.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Sept. 11.

ARRIVAL OF REBEL PRISONERS.

Forty-three rebel prisoners, captured in the vicinity of Sugar Loaf Mountain, arrived here to-day in charge of Lieut. NOIS, Second United States Cavalry. A number of them were dressed in uniforms taken from the dead bodies of our soldiers at Bull Run. The prisoners, though miserably clad, were well shod having, as they stated, procured a good supply of boots and shoes at Frederick. Among their number were one Captain and several Lieutenants. They state that Gen. HILL'S force on Tuesday was encamped at Hyattsville, near Frederick, and that it did not exceed 10,000. They were taken to the Old Capitol prison.

Lieut. NOIS also brought with him several citizens charged with giving aid and comfort to the enemy. One named NOLAN is a well-known Leesburgh rebel, and was caught prowling around our camps near Poolesville. The spies will find accommodations in the Capitol Prison.

VISIT TO THE BATTLE-FIELD.

The last ambulance train from the battle-field returned here to-day. After a most thorough search of the field, it was found that all the wounded had been removed, and the dead buried, and so the train returned empty. The train passed through the enemy's pickets without being molested. The surgeons in charge saw no troops at Centreville. A few companies of cavalry were encamped near Fairfax. Dr. COOLIDGE states that the ambulance drivers behaved in the most disgraceful manner, refusing to assist in removing the wounded unless whisky was furnished them. They also robbed the wounded of blankets provided for their comfort, and broke into the hospital stores and drank a portion of the liquor. The enemy returned us one half of the medical stores they had captured. They kept every case of medical instruments not in use by our surgeons.

GEN. BANKS.

Major-Gen. BANKS is rapidly recovering from the injuries heretofore received, and is stopping with Gen. BURNSIDE. He is at headquarters to-day attending to business.

LITTLE EXCITEMENT.

There is less excitement now about the Public Departments than perhaps at any former period since the war commenced.

QUIET IN ALEXANDRIA.

Accounts from Alexandria show everything there to be quiet. The stores are all open, the sidewalks filled with ladies, and the streets crowded with army trains. The patients in the numerous hospitals there are rapidly recovering. Large forces of workmen are repairing the locomotives recently disabled. No trains are running on the railroad. The order of the city, under Gen. SLOUGH'S administration, is excellent. No liquor, or ale, or lager beer is allowed to be sold there. Secesh is cheerful, in view of the way matters are going.

FROM FREDERICKSBURGH, VA.

Several contrabands, who made their escape from Fredericksburgh, say that when they left that place on Sunday, there were two regiments of rebel infantry encamped on the outskirts of the town. One of these regiments is the Forty-seventh Virginia, which was raised in that section of the State, and had been ordered home by the rebel War Department, to recruit its ranks, which have been greatly thinned during the late battles at Manassas, and before Richmond. The regiment left Fredericksburgh at the commencement of the war with 900 men, and although since that time it has received recruits equal in number to its original force, it returns home with only 216 men rank and file. Everything is very quiet in Fredericksburgh, very few disturbances occurring between the Unionists and Secessionists. Provisions of all kinds have risen since our troops left, the market prices being but a trifle lower than the prices in Richmond. The rebels have commenced the erection of fortifications on the north and east of the town. They have not yet begun to repair the railroad leading to Richmond, but it is thought by the citizens that the necessary repairs will be shortly commenced.

A DECISION AFFIRMED.

The Secretary of the Treasury, on appeal, has affirmed the decision of Collector BARNEY, imposing under the act of March 2, 1861, duty at the rate of two cents per pound, on merchandise claimed by the importers, as chain cable, made of wire or rods less than one-half of one inch in diameter. To this it is interposed that in commercial usage and parlance in this country and England, there are no chains known as chain-cables made of wire or rods of less than one-half of one inch in diameter. It is also affirmed that orange mineral was properly assessed at $2 25 per hundred pounds. It is not provided for by name in the law, but is used for the same general purposes as red lead; and that compositions of glass for jewelers, use, being a "manufacture of glass, or of which glass is a component material," is subject to a duty of thirty per cent. ad valorem.

FEMALE REBELS.

Several females applied to the Provost-Marshal today for passes to Alexandria, but declined signing the obligation not to furnish aid or information to the enemy. Mayor DOZIER, with an injunction to them not to call again, ordered the guard to escort them home.

CONTRABANDS COMING NORTH.

Great numbers of contrabands continue to arrive daily in Alexandria, principally from the region around Fredericksburgh, Va. About one hundred came in to-day. They are provided with food and quarters by the Government.

TOTAL OF OUR WOUNDED.

We learn from Dr. SMITH, of the Surgeon-General's Office, that the wounded in the late battles at Manassas will number about 6,000; 4,500 have already been provided for in this city—the rest in Alexandria and vicinity.

GEN. POPE'S REPORT AND THE STAR.

The Star of this city has a leader to-day, denouncing the TIMES for first printing the Report of Gen. POPE, which it styles a mischievous publication. The Star is believed to be honest in this opinion, and in its censure. Having so long had exclusive privileges in the way of publishing mischievous news, it naturally is jealous of any infringement upon its monopoly. Nobody suspects the Star of sensitiveness, in view of the superior enterprise of its cotemporaries. The Government is delicately invited by the Star to suppress the TIMES for its temerity in furnishing information on the subject of our late disasters. Intimidation is thus added to the means used to prevent exposure of the late military blunders and crimes before Washington.

FROM GEN. HOOKER'S COMMAND.

One of our correspondents with Gen. HOOKER'S corps (late MCDOWELL'S) sends us the following particulars:

The corps is at Mechanicsville, having had a quiet march this morning from Rockville.

Scouting parties discovered rebel pickets within four or five miles, on the west side of Cat-tail Creek, but can learn of no force nearer than New-Market.

The camp has been visited by many Union residents, who represent the rebel force as smaller than the first accounts.

CAPTURE OF REBELS.

Provost-Marshal MOULDEN, of Montgomery County, sent to this city, yesterday, GEORGE RODDY, JESSE WATERS, EDWARD RICH, ANDREW UHLER and POWELL COCKEY, who were captured near Rockville while attempting to make their way to the rebel lines. On the person of RICH the following note was found, which he confessed was intended for Capt. OSCAR HOFF, Captain of the Provost Guard, Richmond, Va.:

BALTIMORE, 1862.

DEAR OSCAR: This will be handed you by my friend. Please do all in your power to forward his views, and render his stay in your city as agreeable as possible. All are well at home. M—— is looking more beautiful than ever, and is as true as steel to you. Yours truly, ——.

They were all sent to the Old Capitol Prison.

SICK AND WOUNDED IN AND ABOUT WASHINGTON.

The total number of sick and wounded soldiers in the various hospitals in and around this city, is 14,500. The hospitals in Alexandria and vicinity contain about 3,000—making a grand total of 17,500.

GEN. SCHENCK.

Gen. SCHENCK is rapidly recovering from his wound received in the late fight, and will not lose his arm as was at first expected. The loss of his sword was caused by the wound being received while his arm was uplifted, and he was cheering on his men.

GENERAL SAXTON.

The statement that Gen. SAXTON, Military Governor of South Carolina, came north to consult with the President, is an error. The voyage was recommended by his physicians, for his health, and he has gone into New England with the same object.

THE NAVIGATION OF THE POTOMAC.

On and after to-morrow passes will be required from all vessels, boats, &c., navigating the Potomac River. These will be issued by the commanding officer of the flotilla, and may be obtained from the naval vessels stationed at Alexandria or at the mouth of the river.

NO PASSES REQUIRED.

Until further orders no passes will be required by civilians desiring to cross the several bridges and ferries leading to Virginia.

CITIZENS OF MARYLAND ARRESTED.

Three citizens of Frederick County, Maryland, were brought to this city to-day and committed to the Old Capitol Prison, charged with giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

DESIRED TRANSFER OF MILROY'S COMMAND.

Petitions to the President are being largely signed in Gen. MILROY'S command, to have it detached from the army of Virginia and sent back to Western Virginia, the scene of MILROY'S earlier triumphs. Neither the General nor his troops are pleased with the operations on the Potomac; but are not sanguine that the petition will be granted.

ARRIVAL OF WOUNDED PRISONERS.

Sergeant BURPEE, Co. B, 4th Maine regiment, captured in the battle of Friday, arrived in Alexandria to-day from Centreville, in charge of the following named soldiers:

WM. F. DINSMORE, 1st Massachusetts, died on the 2d inst., at Centreville.

The rebels stripped the Sergeant of every article of clothing, except his blouse, in which costume he made his way to Alexandria. The wounded were taken to the Seminary Hospital, Alexandria.

PRISONERS OF STATE.

The following prisoners of State were brought to the Provost-Marshal's office, this morning, and sent to the Old Capitol: S. B. PILES, W. H. HOWARD, R. T. TARBO, and F. N. GALT. They are residents of Upper Maryland, and were sent in by the Provost-Marshal-General of the Army of Virginia.

Brig.-Gen. BAYARD, it is confidently said by his friends, is to be made a Major-General and Chief of Cavalry, and that Lieut.-Col. KILPATRICK is to be promoted to a Brigadier-Generalship, and the command of BAYARD'S Brigade. Gen. BAYARD is now in Washington on duty, and Col. KILPATRICK has been placed in command in the front.

LETTER FROM GEN. McDOWELL.

A Court of Inquiry Called for—He Asks the President for a Thorough Public Investigation of His Conduct.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6, 1862.

To His Excellency the President:

I have been informed by a Senator that he has seen a note in pencil, written by a Colonel of Cavalry mortally wounded in the recent battle, stating, among other causes, that "he was dying a victim to MCDOWELL'S treachery," and that his last request was that this note might be shown to you. That the Colonel believed this charge, and felt that his last act on earth was a great public service, there can be, I think, no question. This solemn accusation, from the grave of a gallant officer who died for his country, is entitled to great consideration, and I feel called upon to endeavor to meet it as well as so general a charge, from one now no longer able to support it, can be met.

I, therefore, beg you to please cause a Court to be instituted for its investigation; and, in the absence of any knowledge whatever as to the particular act or acts, time or place, or general conduct the deceased may have had in view, I have to ask that the inquiry be without limitation, and be upon any point and every subject which may in any way be supposed to have led to his belief; that it may be directed to my whole conduct as a general officer, either under another, or whilst in a separate command, whether on matters of administration or command—to my correspondence with any of the enemy's commanders, or with any one within the enemy's lines—to my conduct, and the policy pursued by me toward the inhabitants of the country occupied by our troops with reference to themselves or their property;—and, further, to any imputations of indirect treachery or disloyalty toward the nation, or any individual having, like myself, an important trust; whether I have, or have not, been faithful as a subordinate to those placed over me, giving them heartily, and to the best of my capacity, all the support in my power; and whether I have or have not failed, through unworthy personal motives, to go to the aid of, or send reinforcements to, my brother Commanders.

That this subject of my alleged treachery or disloyalty may be fully inquired into, I beg that all officers, soldiers or civilians, who know, or think they know, of any act of mine liable to the charge in question, be allowed and invited to make it known to the Court.

I also beg that the proceedings of the Court may be open and free to the Press from day to day.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

(Signed,) IRVIN MCDOWELL,
Comdg. Third Army Corps, Army of Virginia.

Movements of Gen. McDowell.

THE MILITARY EXCITEMENT.

NINTH WARD WAR MEETING.

A Local Defence Association Formed—Speech by Rev. Dr. Burchard—Resolutions, etc.

Pursuant to a stirring call published in the TIMES and other City papers, a considerable number of the citizens of the Ninth Ward assembled last evening in the long hall of the Bleecker Building, in the street of that name, to devise ways and means of forming a Ward military organization for local defence, in view of the threatened rebel irruption in the Northern States.

At 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order by E. DENNISON, M. D., who proposed the following list of officers, which was received and adopted by acclamation, viz.:

President—John W. Thorne.

Vice-Presidents—T. F. Randolph, Cyrus Loutrel, W. Z. Cunningham, John Wilson, A. G. Bogert, Isaac Seltzers.

Secretaries—A. J. Campbell, A. B. Cherry.

Mr. THORNE, in assuming the duties of the Chair, briefly stated the patriotic objects of the meeting, insisted on the necessity of instant organization and the danger of invasion, and concluded with an eloquent appeal in behalf of the Flag of the Union, with whose colors the walls and platform of the hall were draped.

The Secretary then read the subjoined resolutions, which were unanimously and enthusiastically adopted:

Whereas, The enemies of our beloved Union are in arms of rebellion, and are now invading the loyal States, devastating their soil and murdering loyal citizens; and

Whereas, Such armed hosts can only be effectively checked and repelled by bodies of men instructed and drilled in the art of war; therefore,

Resolved, That the citizens of the Ninth Ward of all ages, desirous of guarding against all possible contingences that may arise, deem it necessary to act concertedly; therefore be it further

Resolved, That they will form themselves into a battalion for military instruction and drill, to be known as the Ninth Ward Battalion, pledging themselves by signing the roll to abide by such necessary rules and regulations as may be required to insure usefulness and success.

The Chairman then introduced to the audience Rev. Dr. BURCHARD, who, in a vehement and telling address, denounced the rebellion, satirized the dilatory and incompetent character of the Union Generals, apostrophized and invoked the advent of some great Napoleonic genius for a leader, and called upon all to take up arms to prosecute the war until either the Union should be restored or the South utterly subjugated. Applause frequently greeted the Reverend gentleman's effort, and he was often interrupted by the grotesquely patriotic exclamations of some of his aged hearers.

At the conclusion of these remarks, the Secretary read a fresh resolution, appointing an Executive Committee of Nine to procure drill-rooms and make other arrangements necessary for the organization. This being approved, the Chair named as such Committee the following gentlemen:

Andrew Hoogland, Cyrus Loutrel, W. H. Van Valer, Edward H. Senior, Jacob Bogert, A. G. Bogert, Wm. T. Church, John Wilson, James Harrison.

Lists were at once opened, and under the urgent calls of Dr. BURCHARD, the Chairman, and others who were active in the matter, about seventy-five persons, including many very aged and some very young men, enrolled their names, Dr. BURCHARD being the first to sign, with the remark, that he was willing to go himself as chaplain of a regiment, to consist of all the males in his own congregation. While this process was going on, the Chairman announced aloud that the signers compromised themselves in no respect, and that any expenses incurred would be defrayed by those who had means, in behalf of those who had none.

By 9½ P. M., the meeting had gradually dispersed, with the understanding that all enrolled members are to assemble for drill on Monday next, at 7 P. M., on Washington Parade-Ground, at the northwest corner of McDougal-street and Waverly-place. The Executive Committee subsequently held a conference, preliminary to immediate action.

The Cortlandt-street National Guard.

The Committee appointed at the recent war meeting, in Cortlandt-street, assembled yesterday at 5 P. M., in the Merchant's Hotel, where they elected the following permanent officers of the body, from which is to emanate the organization to be termed the Cortlandt-street National Guard:

President.—JONATHAN H. RANSON.

Secretary and Treasurer.—Henry H. Morgan.

Committee of Council.—H. K. Wells, James S. Warren, H. Hoagland, A. Quackenbush, Jr., O. B. Pell, Thomas H. Conklin, Thomas Winchester.

Committee of Finance.—Thomas W. Caughlan, Wm. H. Lyon, W. J. Schenck, W. A. Ransom, C. M'Nulty.

A Sub-Committee was also appointed to make preliminary arrangements for drill rooms, &c., and the Conference ended, subject to the call of the President of the organization.

'Neath a ragged palmetto a Southerner sat,
A twisting the band of his Panama hat,
And trying to lighten his mind of a load
By humming the words of the following ode:
"Oh! for a nigger, and oh! for a whip;
Oh! for a cock-tail, and oh! for a nip;
Oh! for a shot at old Greeley and Beecher;
Oh! for a crack at a Yankee school teacher;
Oh! for a captain, and oh! for a ship;
Oh! for a cargo of niggers each trip."

Not contented with owing for all that he'd got.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 12 Laight-st., near Canal, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. By his special experience in this much-neglected branch of medical science he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Gleet or Gonorrhœa of long standing, where all internal remedies have failed, permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance, failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD & CO., No. 12 Laight-st., the only place.

DR. COBBETT, MEMBER OF THE N. Y. PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without confinement or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what he can accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

IMPORTANT FROM THE WEST.

The Rebels Approaching Cincinnati in Force.

Their Main Body Only Seven Miles from Covington.

THE NATIONAL PICKETS DRIVEN IN.

A FIGHT EXPECTED YESTERDAY.

No Apprehensions as to the Result.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, Sept. 11—2¼ P. M.

It is generally expected that a great fight will come off to-day, but so far only skirmishing has taken place.

The rebels are reported in force at Latonia Springs, about seven miles from Covington.

Our forces are very large.

The city is considered safe.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Thursday, Sept. 11.

Advices from Cincinnati state that the most vigorous warlike preparations are going on there.

Large numbers of men have gone from this city to Cincinnati to-day.

It is reported that the rebels drove in our pickets in that vicinity to-day.

The rebels are about two miles from our lines, gradually feeling our position.

No reverse is apprehended, as a corps of veteran Union soldiers arrived in Cincinnati to-day.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, Sept. 11.

There was picket skirmishing along the entire line of the West Licking River this afternoon. We lost two men killed. The enemy's loss is not known.

The enemy is throwing up breastworks to-night in front of Fort Wallace. They will be shelled out to-morrow.

Several regiments of Gen. GRANT's army arrived to-day. Others are en route.

There have been large arrivals of other regiments and "squirrel hunters."

CINCINNATI, Friday, Sept. 11.

There has been no battle yet, although it is expected hourly.

The pickets are skirmishing along the entire line of the Licking River. I saw, this morning, the rebel pickets firing, and being fired at, not more than a mile from Mitchell.

Several of our men have been wounded to-day, and one poisoned by the inmates of a house just within our picket lines.

Reinforcements of veteran troops are constantly arriving, and we are now ready for KIRBY SMITH whenever he chooses to come.

Cincinnati is safe.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, Sept. 11—8 P. M.

Maysville was taken to-day by the rebel MORGAN with 1,500 men. No resistance was made.

FROM CUMBERLAND GAP.

The Peril to Our Army in East Tennessee.

The following is an extract of a letter from a distinguished Union officer serving with the forces under Gen. MORGAN at Cumberland Gap:

CUMBERLAND GAP, Tenn., Aug. 28, 1862.

We are surrounded, and our supplies are cut off! The rebels have twenty thousand men, just out of cannon-shot in our front, and their pickets run across the mountains from valley to valley, up to within two miles of this Gap. More of the enemy's troops are now on their way from Knoxville, and two rebel columns have also gained our rear, one of which crossed over by Rogers' and the other by Big Creek Gap. One of these columns, under Gen. KIRBY SMITH, is, it is said, about to push its way up to Northern Kentucky, to attempt to cross the Ohio River, and by the time this reaches you, if it ever does, the whole of Eastern Kentucky will, I fear, have fallen into the hands of the rebels, and we may be isolated by a distance of hundreds of miles from the only region from which we can hope for succor. We have begged for reinforcements and support for two months past, so that we might penetrate into East Tennessee, where both friends and supplies await us, but the authorities at Washington have turned a deaf ear to our entreaties.

Though the rebel force is great on all sides of us, I do not believe they will dare to attack us. They evacuated this stronghold with a force 6,000 strong, and with a reinforcement of 12,000 within three hours' march. This was more than twice the number of the National force with which Gen. MORGAN captured the Gap, and which had no reinforcements within a distance of one hundred miles. But the enemy is unable to cope with such determined men as compose this little army.

I am assured by the highest authority here, that in no event will Cumberland Gap be surrendered or evacuated. The only means the rebels have of destroying us is to starve us to death; and I own that in this respect the prospect looks somewhat gloomy. If the rebels now moving northward reach the Ohio River, we shall then despair of relief; and by the end of September or October, our bones bleaching on the mountains may be all that can be found of Gen. MORGAN's army.

If it be in the programme of the Government to relieve us, a column of 20,000 men must be immediately sent from Lexington. It can be done. Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky can furnish the troops; and if they are not hampered by absurd orders, the column might yet reach us in time. Gen. MORGAN says that, if apprised of the approach of a relieving force, he himself would advance to meet it with a portion of his army, and cut his way through the beleaguering rebels or perish in the attempt.

The enemy's troops are like famished wolves. Hunger has made them desperate. Look out for ravages, if they get up into the blue grass region of Kentucky.

Daily and hourly we look anxiously for relief. We listen with sharp ears for the drum-tap of Gen. BUEL in the Southwest, or the bugles of a Union column advancing over the hills from the North. High on the mountain-peaks this little army defiantly upholds the flaming emblem of the Republic. God forbid that our Government should leave us to be starved out or slaughtered piecemeal, uncared for, in these solitudes.

In view of the perils that surround us, Gen. MORGAN has issued the following inspiriting address to his army, which has been read at the head of every corps and regiment in the vicinity of Cumberland Gap:

HEADQUARTERS SEVENTH DIVISION, ARMY OF THE OHIO, CUMBERLAND GAP, Aug. 18, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 73.—OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS OF THE SEVENTH DIVISION! The opportunity you have so long desired has at length arrived, and you will now prove to your friends, your country and the world, that you are soldiers in fact and deed, as well as in name.

The famished enemy is in despair. Driven from Chattanooga, and Richmond escaping from his grasp, he sees that he is forced to occupy Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio, or give up the contest.

Two months ago, to-day, he ingloriously abandoned this formidable stronghold, although his force was then greater than yours. If it was then strong, it is infinitely stronger now—stronger in fortifications, stronger in artillery, and, above all, stronger in the brave hearts and strong arms which defend this mountain fastness, destined to become immortal from your glorious deeds.

They talk of the enemy's numbers. Believe me, soldiers, his very strength is his greatest weakness, for the more men he has the sooner will they starve.

One word to you, and regard that word as [illegible] fate. You can hold this position against any odds, and you have but to determine to conquer, and victory is yours!

Comrades, I greet and salute you!

GEORGE W. MORGAN,
Brigadier-General commanding the Victors of Cumberland Gap.

The above list is about one-third of the names of the paroled prisoners that arrived here this morning on the flag of truce boat Cossack, from Aiken's Landing. I should have been able to have sent you a complete list had it not been for the churlishness of Capt. HALL, Sixty-fourth Illinois, who gave orders to the guard preventing me from obtaining the balance. From the appearance of his uniform I should suppose that he has never smelt powder.

There was quite a number of sick and wounded on board. Dr. GILBERT, the Medical Purveyor of this Department, did everything in his power to relieve them, and expressed regret that he was unable to send surgeons with them to the North.

Below you will find the names of deserters from the Union army, now held in durance vile at the Libby Prison, Richmond. The list was furnished by a Union soldier, who acted as assistant to the Confederate Clerk of the prison.

A Woman and her two Children Murdered.

BOSTON, Thursday, Sept. 11.

In the town of Otis, Berkshire County, on Sunday afternoon, the wife of GEO. JONES and her two young children were murdered in the woods while gathering berries. Mrs. JONES was brutally outraged before being murdered. She was twenty-two years old. Some negroes, seen in the vicinity, are suspected.

STATE POLITICS.

Second Day's Proceedings of the Democratic State Convention.

The Full State Ticket Nominated and a Platform Adopted.

ALBANY, Thursday, Sept. 11, 1862.

The Convention was called to order at 10 o'clock, by the presiding officer.

Mr. DINNINY offered the following resolution:

Whereas, in view of the liberal call under and in pursuance of which this Convention has convened, we deem it unnecessary by resolutions to adopt a platform, therefore

Resolved, That the Committee on Resolutions be and they are hereby discharged from the further consideration of the subject committed to them, and that we present to the electors at the coming election the Constitutions of the United States and State of New-York, with the speech of our nominee for Governor, made yesterday, as embodying the principles upon which we go into the contest. [Loud applause.]

Mr. R. P. WISNER seconded the resolution. He believed the only platform the party needed was the one upon which it stands now, and upon which it has stood for years—the Union, the Constitution, and the enforcement of the laws. [Cheers.] The noble speech of their candidate for Governor had touched every heart here, and will awaken a responsive echo throughout the land. The Democracy needs nothing else—the Union men of the land can desire nothing more. They would go into this contest with the Constitution clasped to their hearts, and with the banner of their country spread over them, with every star emblazoned upon it. The noble speech to which they had listened yesterday was the basis upon which all good and true men will proudly stand.

The President suggested that, as the Committee on Resolutions were now absent from the Convention, it would be only courteous to them to delay action upon the resolution now offered until they were present.

Mr. DININNY withdrew the resolution for the present, but gave notice that he should renew it when the Committee was prepared to report:

Judge COMSTOCK, from the Committee of Conference, reported that the Committee had met the similar Committee appointed by the Convention at Troy, and he was glad to say that the two Committees, on an interchange of views, found that the principles which actuated the two Conventions was the same, and that the Committee from the Troy Convention had expressed an earneast desire to support the nominees of this Convention. But in order to consolidate their vote upon these nominess, they believed it necessary to place a representative man on the ticket for the second office, as well as for the Clerk of the Court of Appeals. The Committee had suggested for the second place in the State Government the names of D. B. ST. JOHN, WASHINGTON HUNT—[Cheers]—and W. C. HASBROUCK. The Committee further desired to report that they had made no manner of arrangement with the other Committee, but concluded to refer the whole matter to this Convention. The Committee have no other report to make, except to say with great earnestness that in this crisis in public affairs, in their judgment the names of canditates should be selected with great care, in order to unite the votes of all the conservative men of the State in their support.

Capt. RYNDERS did not suppose there was a man within the hearing of his voice who did not know that it would always be distasteful to him to place any man on a ticket which he was going to support whose antecedents were anti-Democratic. He had been as bitter in his political prejudices as any reasonable man could be, but at this time it was necessary to sacrifice all prejudices on the altar of our country. He, therefore, stood here ready to pledge himself to vote for any man who stands upon a broad national platform, and who will aid in sweeping back the black tide of Abolitionism. [Cheers.] He was well informed that the nomination of a Clerk of the Court of Appeals, only, from the other conservative party, would be ineffectual to unite all the votes of that party for the ticket. He was, therefore, prepared to select a name from those offered by the Committee, and to place in the office of Lieutenant-Governor a candidate who was competent to discharge its duties, and whose principles warranted the support of the Democratic Party. If the call of the State Committee was to be faithfully carried out, he did not see how the course suggested by the Committee of Conference could be objected to. He suggested the name of DANIEL B. ST. JOHN for the office of Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. THOMAS C. FIELDS did not understand that the name of D. B. St. JOHN was unanimously presented by the New-York delegation. He should be prepared to express his views when the nomination came up in order.

The report of the Committee of Conference having been accepted,

Mr. S. T. FAIRCHILD moved that the Convention now proceed to vote viva voce for a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and that each Assembly District have one vote.

Mr. MANDERVILLE, of Columbia, moved to vote by ballot, but withdrew the amendment, after discussion.

The motion to proceed to a viva voce for Lieutenant-Governor, was carried.

Mr. TABER, of Queens, suggested the name of Hon. DAVID R. FLOYD JONES, of Queens.

Mr. HARING, of Rockland, suggested the name of Hon. A. B. CONGDEN, of Rockland.

The vote was then taken, and resulted as follows:

David R. Floyd Jones	72	A. B. Congden	4
D. B. St. John	47

When the name of HENRY C. MURPHY was called, he desired to explain his vote. He would rejoice to see DAVID R. FLOYD JONES placed upon the ticket. He was his warm personal friend. But he had a duty to perform here above all personal considerations, and believing that the nomination of another party would secure the success of the ticket nominated by this Convention beyond peradventure, he should cast his vote for WASHINGTON HUNT. [Applause.]

Mr. I. SHAFFER said that he did not understand the Committee of Conference to have recommended any nomination at all. He did not therefore consider the votes cast for Mr. JONES were cast against the recommendation of the Committee of Conference.

Judge COMSTOCK explained that the Committee of Conference made no recommendation, but submitted a report simply setting forth what had been said to them by the other Committee.

Mr. MURPHY said that he so understood the matter. But he deemed it to be his duty to vote in accordance with the wishes of the Troy Convention. Understanding, however, that WASHINGTON HUNT did not desire to accept any office, he changed his vote to D. B. ST. JOHN. [Applause.]

Mr. SHAFFER did not understand that the Committee of the Constitutional Convention made it a sine qua non that their candidate for Lieutenant-Governor must be placed on the ticket in order to secure for it their indorsement.

Judge COMSTOCK said they had not made any nomination an absolute condition for their support of the nominees. But they had expressed the conviction that their entire vote of the party could not be drawn out and secured, unless such nomination were made.

When New-York was reached,

Mr. ELIJAH F. PURDY said he rose to perform a duty imposed upon him by the delegation from New-York. The whole delegation and the Democracy of the City love and revere DAVID R. FLOYD JONES, but feeling they had a duty to perform above all such considerations, they cast their whole 17 votes for DANIEL B. ST. JOHN. [Cheers.]

When the result of the ballot was announced,

Mr. PURDY, on behalf of the New-York delegation, moved that the nomination of DAVID R. FLOYD JONES be made unanimous. [Loud applause.]

The President, having put the question, declared that DAVID R. FLOYD JONES was the unanimous nominee of the Convention for the office of Lieutenant-Governor. [Applause.]

On motion of S. T. FAIRCHILD, the Convention proceeded to a viva voce vote for a candidate for Canal Commissioner, with the following result:

William J. Skinner	104	James R. Gandall	20

On motion of Mr. STEPHEN TABER, the nomination of Mr. SKINNER was made unanimous, and received with warm applause.

The Convention then proceeded to nominate a candidate for the office of State Prison Inspector by a viva voce vote, with the following result:

Gaylord J. Clark, of Niagara	48
Mr. Elderkin	32
Mr. Walker	11
E. J. Clark, of Jefferson	30
Mr. Sayre	3

The Chair announced that there was no choice, and ordered a second ballot, which was taken, after the adoption of a motion to take the three highest candidates. On the second ballot the vote was:

G. J. Clark	50
Mr. Elderkin	47
E. J. Clark	21

There being no choice, a third ballot was ordered, when Mr. CLARK, of Niagara, received 64 votes, and Mr. ELDERKIN 53.

Mr. GAYLORD J. CLARK was declared the nominee, and the vote was made unanimous.

Mr. R. P. WISNER moved that FREDERICK A. TALLMADGE be unanimously nominated for the office of Clerk of the Court of Appeals, for the ensuing year. Adopted.

The motion was unanimously adopted, amidst loud applause; and

The President declared Mr. TALMADGE duly nominated.

Mr. RUSSELL, of Niagara, moved that the delegations from the several Judicial Districts now proceed to select and report to this Convention the names of two delegates from each district to form the State Central Committee.

On motion of Mr. A. P. LANNING, the Convention then took a recess of twenty minutes, to enable the delegates to make choice of their Committeemen.

On reassembling, the following gentlemen were appointed the State Central Committee for the ensuing year:

First District—Elijah F. Purdy, Benjamin Ray, New-York.

Second District—Edmund G. Sutherland, Westchester; James H. Brundage, Kings.

Third District—Peter Cagger, Albany; Jacab Hardenburgh, Ulster.

Fourth District—Richard H. Cushney, Edwin Dodge, St. Lawrence.

Fifth District—Willard Johnson, Oswego; Lorenzo Carrol, Herkimer.

Sixth District—Duncan S. Magee, Schuyler; Dorr Russell, Otsego.

Seventh District—William C. Rowley, Monroe; Elmore P. Ross, Cayuga.

Eighth District—Dean Richmond, Genesee; A. P. Laning, Erie.

On motion, the State Central Committee was instructed to procure the printing of two hundred thousand copies of Governor SEYMOUR'S speech, delivered yesterday, and fifty thousand copies in the German language.

A. P. LANING, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported the following:

Resolved, That the Democracy of New York, waiving the expression of their views upon questions not rendered imperative by the imperiled condition of their country, hereby declare:

First—That they will continue to render the Government their sincere and united support in the use of all legitimate means to suppress the rebellion and to restore the Union as it was, and maintain the Constitution as it is—believing that that sacred Instrument, founded in wisdom by our fathers, clothes the constituted authorities with full power to accomplish such purpose.

Second—That by the following resolution, unanimously passed by Congress in July, 1861, the Government was pledged to the policy inculcated therein, and which cannot be departed from without violation of public faith, viz:

Resolved, That the present deplorable civil war has been forced upon the country by the Disunionists of the Southern States, now in arms against the Constitutional Government, and in arms around the Capital; that in this National emergency, Congress, banishing all feelings of mere passion or resentment, will recollect only its duty to the whole country; that this war is not waged, on their part, in any spirit of oppression or for any purpose of conquest or subjugation, or purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of those States, but to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution and to preserve the Union, with all the dignity, equality and rights of the several States unimpaired, and that as soon as these objects are accomplished the war ought to cease.

Third—That we, having confidence in the loyalty of the citizens of New-York, reiterate the sentiments heretofore expressed by the Democratic Party—that the illegal and unconstitutional arrests and imprisonment of citizens of this State, are without the justification of necessity, and should be discontinued.

Fourth—That we are willing to act in the coming election with any class of loyal citizens who agree with us in the principles herein expressed; that we hereby invite the coperation of all citizens in giving the most emphatic expression to these principles by supporting the ticket nominated by this Convention.

Mr. DININNY, after explaining the motive which actuated him in offering the resolution to dispense with making a platform, declared that he heartily indorsed every word of the resolutions just read, and withdrew his former motion amidst loud applause.

Hon. FERNANDO WOOD offered a substitute for the third resolution, which elicited a spirited debate, in which Messrs. FERNANDO WOOD, S. F. FAIRCHILD, THOMAS S. FIELDS and others, took part, when the amendment was withdrawn.

Judge COMSTOCK moved to amend the third resolution by striking out the words "and should be discontinued," and to add in their place the words "and we denounce such arrests as a usurpation and a crime, and that the freedom of the Press, equally protected by the Constitution, ought to be maintained."

The amendment was unanimously agreed to, and the resolutions as amended were then adopted without dissent, and with loud cheers.

On motion of Mr. ELIJAH F. PURDY, the customary vote of thanks to the officers of the meeting was adopted.

The President, on behalf of the officers, returned thanks for the expression of satisfaction on the part of the Convention. He congratulated the Convention on the successful result of its labor, hoping and believing that they would exercise a potential and beneficial influence on the struggle now going on for the preservation of the Union.

He congratulated them also on the excellent choice they had made of candidates for the several offices in the State Government, and particularly on the nomination of their accomplished, able and patriotic candidate for the Chief Magistracy, who is abundantly able to steer the Ship of State through all the dangers which will surround it for the next few years. He exhorted them as they went forth from this hall to resolve to put forth all their efforts to save the country from destruction, and to remember that one of the most potential means to secure such a result is the success of the Democratic party in this State. [Loud applause.]

Mr. PURDY moved that the proceedings of this Convention be published in all the Democratic papers of the State. Agreed to, and the Convention adjourned sine die, with nine hearty cheers for the Ticket.

Rumored Loss of the United States Steam Gunboat South Carolina.

Hardly had the news of the wreck of the United States steam sloop-of-war Adirondack been confirmed, when the South Carolina is reported to have gone down. For several days no intelligence has been received confirming or contradicting the painful announcement, and naval people have begun to give up all hopes of hearing of the vessel again. It should be borne in mind, however, that the Niagara, Sabine, Seminole, Congress and Wabash were all, at different times, reported lost, when they were actually on their way to their designed destination. The saddest part of the rumor about the South Carolina, is the fact that no particulars are given even of the safety of her officers and crew. It is stated merely that "she followed, too accurately, the fatal lead of the Adirondack." The fact that Capt. GANESVOORT, of the latter, and Capt. ALMY, of the South Carolina, were especially detached from the Brooklyn Navy-yard for the express purpose of commanding both the vessels named, which were finished out, previous to their last voyage, in the most careful manner, adds interest to the report.

The South Carolina was a screw steamer of 1,165 tons burden, converted into a regular navy gunboat by workmen in the employ of the Navy Department. She was 217 feet long, 33 feet wide, and 25 feet deep. On the 3d of May, 1861, she was purchased for the Government, at Boston for the sum of $172,500, the same price at the same time being paid for the transport Massachusetts, her sister ship. For a long time she was most successfully engaged on the blockade, and captured, besides a large number of prizes, the Confederate steamer Magnolia, which is now herself a most successful gunboat. The South Carolina was recently thoroughly overhauled at Baltimore, and left that port in excellent condition about two months since. She had about 110 men and a small guard of marines on board. Capt. ALMY was a native of Rhode Island, and was appointed from that State on the 8th of March, 1841. His name follows on the Register that of DAVID D. PORTER, of Pennsylvania, and is the next but one to the cognomen of WILLIAM L. MAURY, now one of the chief naval officers of the "Confederate States." When Capt. (now Rear-Admiral) FOOTE, and Commodore (now Admiral) BERESS were the "authorities" of the Brooklyn Navy-yard, Capt. ALMY was Executive Officer. His friends here would be exceedingly distressed to know that he was in any way unfortunate in his new position, as his former career was a most successful one. The other officers of the South Carolina being chiefly new "volunteer" appointments, are not on the Navy Register.

Arrival of the Steam Gunboat Ottawa.

The United States steam gunboat Ottawa, Lieut.-Commanding J. BLAKELEY CREIGHTON, arrived at this port last evening from Stono River, S. C., which port she sailed from on the 7th inst. She had heavy weather during the passage.

The Ottawa left this port Oct. 16 last, under command of Lieut. THOMAS H. STEVENS, (now of the Monitor,) with the Port Royal Expedition, where she took part in the bombardment, as also in the reconnoissance and engagement with the rebel Commodore TATNALL'S fleet. She was also one of the vessels of the expedition to Port Royal Ferry on Jan. 1, successfully covering the landing of the troops under the late Gen. STEVENS. She was the first vessel to enter the port of Fernandina, Fla., taking possession of Fort Clinch, the first United States fort retaken from the enemy, at the same time capturing the steamer Darlington. Chasing and shelling the last train of cars leaving that place the same evening, she took possession of St. Mary's, ascended the river 40 miles, being attacked on the return by a regiment of Mississippi Rifles, who were driven back.

She penetrated the St. John's River 100 miles into the interior of Florida, where Capt. STEVENS, with light draught gunboats, succeeded in finding and raising the yacht America. Since that period she has been, "under her present commander," actively employed on the blockade, and in the recent movements at Stono River and James Island.

MICHAEL O'BRIEN, fireman, a native of Brooklyn, died on board Aug. 22, and was buried on Cole's Island, Stono River.

LIST OF OFFICERS.

Lieut.-Commanding J. BLAKELEY CREIGHTON; Lieutenant and Executive Officer, George B. White; Acting-Masters, Rufus R. Dued and Samuel Hawes; Assistant-Surgeon, Chas. O. Carpenter; Assistant-Paymaster, Chas. H. Noyes; Chief-Engineer, Wm. W. Dungan; Third Assistant-Engineers, E. W. Koehl, F. C. Prindle and Robert B. Hine; Master's Mates, Henry R. Kirwan and James Finleysen.

A Correction.

In a letter from St. John's River, Florida, dated Aug. 16, and published in the TIMES of Sept. 5, one of our correspondents, after giving an account of the capture, by the Captain of the United States steamer E. B. Hale, of a negro slave belonging to Mrs. BAXTER, a British subject from Nassau—adds:

"By the way, this Mrs. BAXTER has paid large sums for the support of the Confederate Government."

We learn, on perfectly reliable authority, that this statement does very great injustice to the lady whose name is mentioned, and that she has never paid any sums of money or made any other contributions whatever to the support of the Confederate Government. We take great pleasure in making the correction, only regretting that any necessity for it should have arisen.

Fort Lafayette, remarkable to say, does not contain a Secessionist who is in the habit of wearing a KNOX hat. Let the people provide themselves with KNOX hats at once from No. 212 Broadway, and they will be congratulated by all their old friends, and find plenty of new ones. Abjure all hard, rough hats, sold at many places, and save your temper and money by patronizing KNOX.
